PREMIER THREATENS RESIGNATION UNLESS SUPPORT COMPLETE

Says Political Obstacles Being Thrown in Way of Spanish Loyalist Government—Commander Of Defence Forces Has Command Enlarged —Oviedo Defenders Take to Sewers

(Copyright, 1937, by the Havas News Agency)

VALENCIA, Feb. 26 (Ø).—Premier Francisco Largo Caballero threatened tonight to resign unless there is a halt to domestic political obstacles, which, he admitted for the first time, are being thrown in the way of his Government.

After a conference with ministers representing every shade of Leftist opinion, the Premier disclosed in a communique to the press that he was ready to step down if he could not feel certain of undivided support.

PREMIER'S COMPLAINTS

The Premier complained of Leftists innocently furthering insurgent aims and of friendly powers which "declare the war must end, but do not add that it must end in our victory."

Referring to enforcement of non-intervention on March 6, Largo Caballero said:

"We are going then to see the most delicate moment of the war. We have to make definite decisions. I will not remain head of the Government if my position is not firm.

"I think it is, but, if everyone does not believe as I do, I will not be an obstacle."

Some newspapers of unquestioned good faith, but victimized by under-

DUKE MAY SELL HIS E P RANCH

Order-in-Council Passed by Aberhart Government Affecting Oil Leases

EDMONTON, Feb. 26 (Ø).—Alberta may lose its royal rancher, the Duke of Windsor, who bought a 3,840-acre ranch at High River in 1919 on his first trip to Canada.

The Aberhart Government passed an order-in-council today affecting the oil leases on the EP ranch, which, in part, read as follows: "Whereas, representations have been made to the Department of Lands and Mines that His Royal Highness the Duke of Windsor, formerly the Prince of Wales, contemplates disposing of his ranch . . ."

Despite this, Prof. W. L. Carlyle, manager of the ranch, announce at his Calgary home that no definite steps had been taken to sell the ranch and that the Duke of Windsor had no personal knowledge of the change in oil regulations affecting his range lands.

A PROTECTION CLAUSE

"The change was sought just in case a sale is arranged in the future," Carlyle said. "It was just a protection clause to keep the property free from an oil development rush."

When the duke originally bought the ranch he was given a ninety-nine-year lease on the oil and mineral right with the stipulation it could not be sold with the property. The order-in-council passed today bound the government not to sell the oil right within ten years of disposal of the ranch by the duke, providing it was continued as a stock ranch.

The E P ranch is forty miles from the Turner Valley oils fields and many geologist suspect it covers the main pool.

The Duke of Windsor refused to permit drilling for oil on his property.

U.S. Air Mail Stamp Sells At Big Price

NEW YORK, Feb. 26 (AP).—A United States twenty-four-cents air mail stamp of the 1918 issue, with the inverted centre, was sold at auction by Nicholas Sanabria, a dealer, today for $3,200.

The stamp was purchased by Spencer Anderson, another dealer, for a client.

Another great rarity in United States issues, the thirty-cent issue of 1869 with the inverted centre, was sold today for $3,300.

CONFIDENCE VOTE PASSED

Charges Blum With Leading France to Bankruptcy Decisively Rejected

PARIS, Feb. 27 (AP).—The large Popular Front majority in the Chamber of Deputies early today, gave Premier Leon Blum's Government a decisive two-fold vote of confidence, rejecting charges of his Conservative foes that he was leading France to bankruptcy and dictatorship.

After a bitter all-day debate, in which leaders of the Rightist Opposition asserted the Socialist Premier was permitting a "haemorrhage of gold," Blum twice called on the Chamber to declare its confidence in his programme.

SIGNIFY SUPPORT

The first vote, 361 to 211, rejected an Opposition motion proposing "the order of the day without confidence." The Popular Front then voted the order of the day, signifying its renewed support of the Cabinet, 361 to 209.

Before the balloting, Premier Blum threatened to carry the issue to the electorate if opposition to his Popular Front programme compelled him to do so. Turning to the right of the Chamber, with a broad smile, he challenged his opponents:

BLUM STRIKES BACK

Blum was striking back at his enemies, led by the patrician Pierre-Etienne Flandin, former Premier, who charged that the Socialist Premier was leading France to bankruptcy and dictatorship.

He emphasized that he would complete the Popular Front programme and then consult the parties making up his majority concerning a new programme.

He warned that if the Popular Front were overthrown, there would be danger of "an explosion" from the working class.

POLICE BULLET HITS SUSPECT

Officer Shoots to Stop Fleeing Man After Shop Broken Into

Kenneth Webster, address not given, was in hospital last night suffering a bullet wound in the thigh, inflicted when Constable John Blackstock fired one shot to stop the flight of a man suspected of breaking and entering Hawkes' Brothers shoe repair shop on Trounce Alley at 11:50 o'clock last night. Webster, police stated, will be charged with breaking and entering.

Webster was allegedly caught leaving the store by Constable Blackstock, who unsuccessfully ordered him to halt. He ran down the alley to Government Street with the constable close behind. Webster failed to stop when commanded by the constable. Blackstock drew his pistol and fired a shot to frighten the fugitive. The bullet ricocheted from the concrete and struck Webster in the thigh, inflicting a flesh wound. He was taken to Jubilee Hospital, and will be charged with breaking and entering, in police court, early next week, police announced.

No High Bid for Queen's Bathtub

PARIS, Feb. 26 (Ø).—About $7.50 was the highest bid for a 240-gallon marble bathtub, belonging to Queen Isabella of Spain, auctioned here.

BABY BADLY SCALDED

VANCOUVER, Feb. 26 (Ø).—Donald Clark, twenty-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Clark, was in hospital tonight with severe burns about the body suffered when he fell into a tub of boiling water at his home. The baby's condition was reported as fair.

Plans Daring Flight Around the World

Amelia Earhart Putnam now plans to do something no one else has ever tried—to fly west around the world. According to her plans, she will start within a month from Oakland, Cal., and stop successively at Honolulu, Howland Island, Lae in New Guinea, Darwin in North Australia, Dakar in Africa, Natal in Brazil and thence to Miami or through Mexico back to Oakland. Captain Harry Manning, shown with Mrs. Putnam (inset, above) will act as navigator.

Combines Investigation Statute to Be Stiffened In Penalties and Scope

Act to Be Placed Under Jurisdiction of Minister of Labor

COMMISSIONER TO BE AT HEAD OF BRANCH

OTTAWA, Feb. 26 (Ø).—Broader interpretation of monopolies, trusts and mergers, stiffened penalties, and consolidation under a permanent commissioner, are changes in the Combines Investigation Act contained in a bill given first reading in the House of Commons today.

The act will be brought back under the jurisdiction of the Labor Minister. The Dominion Trade and Industry Act, one of the Bennett Government social reform statutes recently before the high courts, placed the Combines Act in the hands of the Tariff Board and under jurisdiction of the president of the Privy Council.

Members of the Tariff Board were to have acted also as a Dominion trade and industry commission and are still constituted as such technically, but have never functioned in that capacity. Some sections of the act were found ultra vires by the courts. A public prosecutor who was to have assisted the commission was never appointed.

In a brief discussion on the resolution which preceded introduction of the bill objection was raised by Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Conserva-

Budgeting Expenditures for Food On Scale of Relief Pay

TORONTO, Feb. 26 (Ø).—A group of Anglican Church members here will budget their food expenditures for a week to the level of those families receiving relief in Toronto.

Spokesmen for the group said there were some twenty churchmen trying the experiment, including a retired banker, a manufacturer, two clergymen, a lawyer, a clerk and representatives of other business enterprises. They will live as closely as possible to the standards of relief receipts.

Savings made in the experiment will be donated to a charitable cause. The test starts on March 15 and the parties engaged will be known as the "Thursday Morning Group."

No Politics Enter Administration Of War Pensions

Conservative Spokesman Supports Declaration of Minister That No Canadian Government Has "Chiselled" on Returned Soldiers—Expenditure Exceeds Total Collections

OTTAWA, Feb. 26 (Ø).—Under all governments the administration of war pensions has been completely free from politics, Hon. C. G. Power, Minister of Pensions and National Health, said in the House of Commons tonight.

More than $1,000,000,000, more than all the money collected in income tax since the imposition of that tax, had been paid in pensions.

The minister was replying to Frank Lennard (Conservative, Wentworth), who charged all governments since the Great War had been "chiseling on the returned soldiers."

The minister was supported by Hon. J. Early Lawson (Conservative, York South), who agreed there had never been politics in pensions administration.

ECONOMY NOT OBJECTIVE

Mr. Power said there was no desire for economy in war pensions. He did not care how big the pension bill was, but a pension had to be based on a disability and a veteran had to prove his disability

Provincial Wide Poll Rejects Health Plan by 601 to 13 Ballots

British Columbia physicians and surgeons have formally notified the British Columbia Health Insurance Commission now that out of 614 registered members of the profession polled in the province, 601 have voted against acceptance of the commission's terms, and thirteen in favor of acceptance.

Twenty-six ballots remain to be received before the poll is complete throughout British Columbia. Dr. Thomas McPherson, president, explained yesterday.

The formal notification was given to the commission by Dr. A. J. MacLachlan, registrar of the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Population Of Prairies Shows Gain

OTTAWA, Feb. 26 (Ø).—A gain of about 61,000 in population of the Prairie Provinces in the past five years is shown in final figures of the 1936 census published today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

The total of 2,414,891 for Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta compared with 2,353,529 when the previous census for those provinces was taken in 1931.

SEARCH IN VAIN FOR KIDNAPPERS

Argentine Bad Men Wanted for Questioning — Escape After Exchange of Shots

LA PLATA, Argentina, Feb. 26 (AP).—Hundreds of police and private detectives searched fruitlessly today for the kidnappers of Eugenio Peyrera Iraola, baby son of Argentine wealth.

Argentina's "Public Enemy No. 1," Antonio Caprioli, and a companion, "Little Boy" Martinez, escaped after an exchange of shots with police who sought to question them concerning the kidnapping of the two-year-old boy, who vanished from the lawn of La Sorpresa, Wednesday.

Police declined to confirm newspaper reports the Peyrera Iraola family had been in contact with the kidnapper.

SENTENCED FOR HIS TREACHERY

American Naval Officer Put in Jail for Selling Secrets to Japan

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26 (AP).—Years in prison stretch before John S. Farnsworth, former American naval officer, charged with delivering fleet secrets to the Japanese.

As a warning to others who might be tempted "to sell out their country," Justice James M. Procter fixed his sentence today at from four to twelve years.

Had his crime occurred in wartime, the Justice said, death would have been the penalty.

Farnsworth, grey-haired and broken at forty-three, listened listlessly as the court denounced him for communicating naval secrets to Japanese naval attaches formerly stationed in Washington.

Farnsworth previously had thrown himself upon the mercy of the court, his attorney announcing he would not confess but likewise would not dispute the charge. He tried vainly later to change his plea to "innocent."

Ernie Is Popular With the Ladies

IRTHLINGBOROUGH, Northamptonshire, England, Feb. 26 (AP).—Three hundred girl laundry workers walked out on strike today because their handsome foreman was to be transferred to another plant.

They chanted "We want Ernie!" (Ernest Greasley, twenty-six). Later they agreed to return to work, pending negotiations with the management.

UNEXPECTED DIFFICULTIES FACE NATIONS IMPOSING BARRICADE

Russia and Portugal Decide Not to Join in Naval Blockade — Preparing Measures to Compel Ships to Comply With Patrol Scheme— Great Britain Is Rushing Bill

Land-Control Blockade Plan Reported Virtually Settled

LONDON, Feb. 26 (AP).—European nations trying to set up an international barricade around Spain faced unexpected difficulties tonight. Decision of Russia and Portugal not to join with four other powers at first promised a clear-cut way for the others to launch the programme.

Then it was recalled it would be necessary for each of the twenty-seven nations in the neutrality combine to take separate measures to require shipping to comply with the control scheme.

IMPOSING REGULATIONS

Some nations, it was pointed out, presumably can meet the situation with existing government regulations, but Great Britain rushed preparation of a bill ordering ships bound for Spain to call at "control ports" or "anchorages" to take on committee agents. They will see that no foreign arms or men are aboard.

Land-control phases of the blockade were reported virtually settled today. The plan now calls for only 130 committee agents on the Franco-Spanish frontier.

France and Britain will take back patrol zones they had originally relinquished to Russia and Portugal. Russia had objected to patrolling the Bay of Biscay. Her withdrawal was followed closely by Portugal apparently by agreement.

Civic Elections in Halifax Not to Be Expensive Matter

HALIFAX, Feb. 26 (Ø).—Only $1 is set aside in the Halifax budget to defray costs of civic elections in April. Council was told lack of candidates, resulting in numerous acclamations, has provided sufficient surplus to cover the cost.

Fears Grow As Search Proves Vain

BOSTON, Feb. 26 (AP).—Fear for the safety of twenty-eight men aboard the missing Boston fishing s[illegible]er Gossoon grew tonight as t[illegible] coast guard vessels plowed the seas East of Boston without finding a trace of her.

Since early yesterday, when the Boston trawler Brookline wirelessed the Gossoon was disabled by a lost propellor, the craft and her crew have dropped from sight.

GEISHAS START UNIQUE STRIKE

Eighty Japanese Girl Entertainers Demand Right of Collective Bargaining

OSAKA, Japan, Feb. 27 (AP).—Eighty Geisha, famous dancing and singing girls of Japan, today staged a walkout unique in this strike-ridden world.

The issues were similar to those vexing United States industry—the girls complained they were not permitted to organize for collective bargaining—but the methods were such as could be used only in Japan.

OCCUPY TEMPLE

The eighty marched to the top of a mountain near Osaka and there occupied a well-know Buddhist temple, the Gyokuzoji, and declared they would wage "a fight to the death" if their demands were not granted.

The first measure was to have the bonzes of the temple offer prayers on their behalf to Buddah for victory.

The girls complained their managers were exploiting them and would not permit them to join the Geisha Guild. In spite of the picturesque background of their gesture they kept to the best strategy of the modern strike. Behind them in Osaka they left a small group to maintain contact with their employers and managers for negotiations.

Spanish Prince in Serious Condition

HAVANA, Feb. 26 (Ø).—The Count of Covadonga, one-time heir to the Spanish throne, was reported in serious condition today after an operation to remove an abcess on his thigh.

The count's condition was complicated by "the curse of the Hapsburghs," hereditary haemophilia (tendency to excessive bleeding). The former Prince of Asturias was given a blood transfusion before the operation.

ASKS PEACE GUARANTEES

Britain Wants Collective Security Problem Settled Before Colonial Question

LONDON, Feb. 26 (AP).—Great Britain today set the guaranteed peace of Europe as the price for any consideration of Germany's request for return of former colonies, informed sources said.

Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, was declared by diplomatic sources to have stipulated the terms in a conversation with the German ambassador, Joachim von Ribbentrop, expected to leave for Germany tomorrow to report to Reichchancellor Hitler.

BY GENERAL ACCORD

Before Great Britain could consider returning the Reich's colonies or yielding League of Nations mandates over former German overseas possessions, diplomatic sources said Eden insisted, the security of Europe must be established by a general accord.

The conference was said to have turned to a careful analysis of the state of affairs in Europe generally and the possibility of concluding an effective security pact.

One of the chief stumbling blocks, well-informed sources pointed out, has been Germany's unwillingness to join a pact including Soviet Russia and Czechoslovakia in Eastern Europe, despite the desire of both France and Britain that any security treaty be all-embracing.

The coincidence of the conference and the departure of a Belgian mission to Italy under the leadership of Count Charles de Broqueville, former premier of Belgium, was seen in some quarters as evidence of renewed efforts to reach a Western security agreement to replace the discarded Locarno Treaty.

FOOD KEPT FROM STRIKING MINERS

SYDNEY, Australia, Feb. 27 (Ø).—Police today refused to allow union officials to take food to thirty miners staging a stay-in strike in the North Wallarar Colliery near Newcastle.

The miners have electrified barricades in tunnels leading to the workings and declare they will hold the mine until owners agree to give up the proposed introduction of coal-cutting machinery.

Miners' leaders have threatened a mass march to the colliery in sympathy with those underground.

SENATE PASSES COURT MEASURE

Bill to Permit Justices to Retire Is Sent to White House

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26 (AP).—United States Congress enabled six members of the Supreme Court to retire on full pay for life today, with leaders hopeful that thereby the unremitting strain and tension aroused by President Roosevelt's court reorganization programme may be lessened materially.

Although Senator Johnson (Republican, California) asserted that any justice who withdraws from the court "at this particular time" will forfeit his respect, the Senate passed 76 to 4 and sent to the White House a bill permitting such voluntary retirement for judges who are seventy years old and have served ten years.

HAS ENDORSED MEASURE

At the same time, President Roosevelt, who has endorsed the measure although it was not specifically included in his court recommendations, announced a "fireside" radio talk for March 9. White House officials said they expected the address would include a discussion of his court proposals, which include a recommendation that one new justice be placed on the Supreme bench for each judge over seventy who declines to step down.

As the bill would operate, Chief Justice Hughes, now seventy-four, and Associate Justices Brandeis, eighty; Van Devanter, seventy-seven; McReynolds, seventy-five; Sutherland, seventy-four, and Butler, seventy, would have the privilege of retiring at once.

Hunger-Crazed Men Battle One Another Before Leaving Mine

Survivors Tell Disjointed Story of Fight Between Hungarian Strike Leaders and Those Seeking Escape From Rising Water

PECS, Hungary, Feb. 26 (AP).—A story of hunger-crazed men swinging pick-axes in a battle along murky tunnels at the bottom of a mine shaft was pieced together tonight from the accounts of survivors.

Authorities, however, had difficulty fitting the jig-saw picture of the fight from accounts of the 250 bleeding, hungry "suicide" strikers who staggered from the mine after two days' entombment.

Some, suffering hallucinations, refused to tell police what happened. Others still were too weak to talk.

Those who could tell a coherent story admitted a fight had started—apparently over whether to continue or abandon their hunger strike, but refused to identify any strikers who had insisted on remaining below.

Injured men were brought to the top, but reports others were left dead below could not be verified.

In the fighting, supposedly between strike leaders and those who wanted to escape hunger, gases and rising water, they said axes and heavy clubs were swung in almost utter darkness far beneath the surface.

One striker told how oats for the mine ponies were rationed among the men. Officials who descended after the evacuation said they found sixteen ponies standing with icy water to their bellies, but apparently none the worse for floods and fumes in the 656-foot shaft.

TWO INJURED IN AUTO COLLISION

VANCOUVER, Feb. 26 (Ø).—Two Vancouver newspapermen were injured, one seriously, tonight when the automobile in which they were riding collided with another machine and overturned at a city intersection.

Jack Drummond, twenty-two-year-old reporter, was taken to hospital in a serious condition with a fracture of the skull. Gar McPherson, another reporter, suffered cuts about the head and chest injuries. He was given emergency treatment. Three other persons in the Drummond car escaped injury.

Police said a car driven by Drummond collided with another driven by Herbet E. Ellett when the latter attempted to make a left-hand turn at Burrard and Pacific Streets.

Tag Codfish to Observe Migration

HALIFAX, Feb. 26 (Ø).—To determine the migration of codfish on the Western Banks, 5,000 fish will be "tagged" and released by fishery officials here next month. The survey will enable fishermen to follow the schools more easily.

SEATTLE MAN DIES IN CITY

F. M. Fretwell Passes Away at Royal Jubilee Following Brief Illness

Frank M. Fretwell, of Seattle, prominent in business, social and golfing circles of the Northwest, died in Royal Jubilee Hospital early this morning, following a short illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Fretwell, the former Mrs. A. E. Todd, of Victoria, arrived in the city on Saturday to spend the week-end here. Mr. Fretwell was taken ill and was removed to Royal Jubilee Hospital, where his condition gradually became worse. He succumbed at 12:10 a.m.

Mr. Fretwell was special agent at Seattle for the New York Life Insurance Company. He was a man who took an active interest in public affairs, and was an enthusiastic advocate of good roads. During the Great War he served as a captain in the United States Aviation Corps. He was a member of the Rainier Club, the Broadmore Golf Club and on the executive of the Seattle Automobile Club.

A friendly man, he enjoyed a wide circle of acquaintances throughout the Northwest, who will miss him greatly. Among them will be a host of friends in Victoria.

He is survived by his sorrowing widow and her two sons, by her former marriage, Joe Ernest and Richard Hunter.

The remains will be forwarded to Seattle for interment. The funeral will be held there on Monday.

Glenn Bell, San Francisco, secretary-treasurer; Dr. Harold Brunn, San Francisco; Dr. Homer D. Dudley, Seattle; Dr. Charles T. Sturgeon, Los Angeles; Dr. Loren H. Dr. Chandler was chosen to replace Dr. Howard C. Naffziger, of San Francisco.

SCIENTIFIC SESSION

A scientific session was held in the Princess Louise dining-room of the Empress Hotel yesterday morning, when papers were presented by Dr. Harold H. Hitchcock, Oakland, and Dr. John M. Schmoele. Discussion was led by Dr. LeRoy Abbott, San Francisco, and Dr. Richard B. Dillehunt, Portland.

Impressions of neurosurgical clinics in England, France and Scandanavia were given by Dr. H. W. Fleming, San Francisco.

Dr. Homer D. Dudley, Seattle, prevented by the length of discussions from presenting his paper on "Acute Infections of the Hand," will do so this morning.

PROGRESS FOR YEAR UNUSUAL

Excellent Reports Presented at Annual Meeting of Red Cross Division

VANCOUVER, Feb. 26 (C.P.).—An 18,000 increase for membership for British Columbia and unusual progress for the year 1936 were the highlights of the reports Colonel John S. Tait, president, and Commissioner H. M. Birch-Jones presented today at the annual meeting of the British Columbia division of the Red Cross.

Colonel Tait told of the successful work being carried out by first aid posts established on the Malahat Drive on Vancouver Island and on the Pacific Highway on the Mainland in aiding at serious automobile accidents, and stressed the necessity of further educational tive leader. He could not understand why consolidation and changes should be made at this time and criticized the Government for adding to the expense of administration by creating a new branch in the Labor Department.

COMBINES STATUTE TO BE STIFFENED

The House also gave third reading to the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act and made some progress in consideration of the estimates for the Department of Pensions and National Health.

In explaining his new Combines Act legislation, Labor Minister Norman Rogers said it was designed to restore to the Labor Department the control of the Combines Act and to strengthen it. It would be administered by a permanent commissioner and such special commissioners as it may be necessary to engage from time to time.

MAY BE USED IN ACTIONS

Heretofore, the registrar under the act made preliminary investigations, but special commissioners were appointed to conduct formal inquiries. It is also provided, among numerous changes, that documents used in inquiries may be used in subsequent court actions.

New definitions are provided for the terms, merger, trust and monopolies. A merger under the new act means "the combination resulting from the consolidating or amalgamating of the whole or part of the businesses of any two or more persons, or resulting from the purchase, lease or other acquisition by any person of any control over or interest in the whole or part of the business of any person."

Trust and monopoly mean "one or more persons who, within any particular area or district or generally, (a) substantially control any class or species of business, or (b) have such control over the supply or distribution of or the demand for products of any class or species of business as to enable such person or persons to maintain, enhance or substantially modify or control the prices of such products."

DEFINITION OF COMBINE

Combine means (a) a combination of two or more persons by way of actual or tacit contract, agreement or arrangement having relation to any article or commodity which may be a subject of trade or commerce and having or designed to have the effect of:

(1) Limiting facilities for manufacturing, producing, transporting, supplying, storing or dealing, or

(2) Preventing, limiting or lessening manufacture or production, or

(3) Fixing a common price or a resale price or a common rental, or

(4) Enhancing the price, rental or cost of any article, storage or transportation, or

(5) Preventing or lessening competition in or substantially controlling, within any particular area or district or generally, manufacture, production, purchase, barter, sale, storage, transportation, insurance or supply, or

(6) A merger, trust or monopoly which combination, merger, trust or monopoly has operated or is likely to operate to the detriment or against the interest of the public, whether consumers, producers or others.

SEVERE PENALTIES

Everyone is guilty of an indictable offence who is party or privy to or knowingly assists in the formation or operation of a combine within the meaning of the act. Penalty for an individual is a fine not exceeding $25,000 or imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or to both fine and imprisonment. If a corporation, the penalty is a fine not exceeding $100,000. In the old act these fines were fixed at a maximum of $10,000 and $25,000, respectively.

Penalties are also provided for any person who insults or is guilty of contempt of the commissioner, for failure to attend and give evidence when properly summoned and for refusal to make returns under the act.

PUBLIC PROSECUTOR

In the brief debate, Mr. Rogers said the bill would not affect that section of the Trade and Industry Act dealing with appointment of a public prosecutor. It would, however, repeal Sections 13 and 14 of the act, the former placing combines investigations under the Trade and Industry Commission, and the latter providing certain exemptions from prosecutions. Section 14 was found ultra vires by the Supreme Court of Canada.

With respect to the additional expense arising from the new set-up, Mr. Rogers said he was satisfied the Tariff Board had enough work without attempting the additional task of administering the Combines Act. It had never functioned as a Trade and Industry Commission and there was an accumulation of applications

PUNCTURED ROMANCE

They had been sitting in the swing in the moonlight alone. No word broke the stillness of half an hour until—

"Suppose you had money," she said, "what would you do?"

He threw out his chest in all the glory of young manhood. "I'd travel!"

He felt her warm young hand slide into his. When he looked up she had gone. In his hand was a nickel!"

Restless Nights - Pepless Days Take the Joy Out of Life

MILBURN'S HEALTH AND NERVE PILLS

The potent cause lies in the hurried life we lead, in the extreme nervous tension and fever heat with which we follow in the pursuit of wealth, position and pleasure.

Late hours, want of necessary rest, excessive mental or physical exertion all put a strain on the system it is unable to withstand. No wonder then you pass restless nights and get up in the morning with no ambition to go about your daily tasks.

Take Milburn's H. & N. Pills and see what they will do for you.

Source of Comfort For Future Seen in Cosmic Emnations

Dr. Lee Paul Sieg, President of University of Washington, Addresses Pacific Coast Surgical Association at Annual Dinner Here

"IN one pound of clay there is enough energy to run a 200,000 horse-power plant for one year. In cosmic rays we may indeed have a source of comfort for future generations," Dr. Lee Paul Sieg, president of the University of Washington, told members of the Pacific Coast Surgical Association, who held their annual dinner last night in the Empress Hotel.

Dr. Sieg, who was introduced by Dr. Otis F. Lamson, of Seattle, retiring president of the association, is a graduate of the University of Iowa, a member of many American scientific societies and, before his appointment to the presidency of the University of Washington, professor of physics at the University of Pittsburgh.

COSMIC RAYS

"Cosmic rays may be described as those manifestations we have been unable to count in our endeavor to measure energy, Dr. Sieg, told his audience. "Waves of the smallest kind probably measure one-fifty thousandth of an inch. Smaller still are the X-rays, then the gamma rays emitted by radium, and lastly the smallest thing the physicist knows—the cosmic ray."

The smallest thing in matter he described as the sub-atom, the proton, the electron, or the alpha particle.

"Physicists are uncertain what these rays are," Dr. Sieg continued. "Compton, of Chicago, believes them to be small electrons. Milliken, of the California Tech., describes them as small electric rays."

Continuing, he described their discovery by a German scientist in 1910, who found them by means of a charged electroscope in a captive balloon.

They were named by Milliken in 1925, who gave them the nomenclature of their emanation—the cosmics. They come to the world in a continuous shower night and day. The rays, tremendously great in energy, are supposed to be caused by matter in disintegration, or in process of birth. Both theories, in the opinion of the speaker, were faulty.

EFFECT ON EVOLUTION

He declared that every cubic centimetre of the human body was shot through with these rays seven times per second, and, although they had, evidently, no effect on larger organisms, they may have a tremendous effect on smaller organisms such as cells and spores. "Thus," he maintained, "they may have much to do with evolution."

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, in welcoming the visiting surgeons to Victoria, and to British Columbia, declared that it was such gatherings as these which augmented the friendship between the United States and Canada.

"We have the same ideas of liberty and of justice as you, and the same ties of kindred," he said. "Both nations will yet find a common ground for the liberties of mankind and the freedom of the world.

"It is my sincere hope that you will return to us again in the very near future," Mr. Hamber declared.

TROPHY PRESENTED

Dr. Lamson extended thanks to the executive for the co-operation they had given him during his term as president, and read greetings from the Canadian Medical Association. He introduced his successor, Dr. Whaley Morrison, who expressed his thanks for the hospitality that had been shown to members of the association.

Following the speeches, the Lamson Golf Trophy, won yesterday afternoon on the Colwood course by Dr. H. H. Searles, San Francisco, was presented by Dr. Brion T. King.

This morning the third scientific session will be held in the Empress Hotel, while in the afternoon doctors and their wives will play golf or visit Butchart Gardens. They will return to Seattle by the 4:30 boat.

CABINET AVOIDS B.C. INSURANCE

Return of Premier and Other Ministers Awaited to Settle Questions

British Columbia's little Cabinet studiously avoided health insurance at its meeting yesterday, with four of the eight members of the executive present, under Acting-Premier Gray. It is understood informal discussion turned on the Hedley stock investigation, but no announcement was made. Messrs. Weir, Pearson and MacPherson attended.

Through Dr. Allon Peebles, of the British Columbia Health Insurance Commission, it was announced that the resident staff of that board would be further whittled down. Forty of the seventy employees have been served notice now, and the personnel will be finally reduced to "ten or fifteen," the chairman stated. The commission itself, partly under contract, will continue unchanged.

INQUIRY PRIVATE

Mainland efforts to have the Hedley inquiry open to the public went unanswered here. Members of the ministry appeared to rest on the position that investigation has been launched under responsible officers and that its results will be awaited. All Provincial sources preserved uniform silence with respect to the matter. Inquiry under the Securities Act is held to be private; on the other hand, a public inquiry could be ordered under the Public Inquiries Act.

The Cabinet, it was seen, was waiting in general for some word from Ottawa, where Premier Pattullo, Hon. John Hart and Attorney-General Sloan have been negotiating with the Dominion Government on British Columbia affairs. Whether British Columbia is to get an immediate better terms commission, a loan of $5,000,000, or other form of assistance remained questions not yet answered.

RETURNING HOME

Mr. Sloan is expected back on the Coast on Sunday, Mr. Hart next week, and Premier Pattullo possibly the week after that.

Exclusive of Federal assistance, the big issues then will be what the Government plans to do about a general provincial election and health insurance, both left in the air at present. British Columbia physicians have formally rejected the health plan by a vote of 601 to 13, it developed.

LORRE STARS IN GERMAN PICTURE

First Showing of Season by Canadian Film Society Takes Place Tomorrow

First showing of the season by the newly formed Victoria Branch of the Canadian Film Society will be held in the Oak Bay Theatre tomorrow afternoon at 2:30, and will feature the German picture "M," a story of psychological murder, starring Peter Lorre, and directed by Fitz Lang. The film is outstanding for its fine photography, marvelous mob scenes, and outstanding acting.

Other short films to be shown include a Japanese cartoon; "Night Mail" produced by the British Post Office; "Joie de Vivre" an animated cartoon produced by British artists in Paris, and a travelogue dealing with art in Salzburg and Vienna.

Private film societies now exist in several cities of Canada, and have come into being since 1935 for the purpose of promoting the study and appreciation of the film as an educational and cultural factor in the life of the nation. Lord Tweedsmuir, honorary president of the society, has enthusiastically supported the movement which is a non-profit making organization.

Membership in the local branch is now open, and is limited to 500. W. H. Hickman, 2122 McNeil Avenue, is organizing secretary.

OAK BAY THEATRE Walter Huston and Ruth Chatterton head the cast of Samuel Goldwyn's screen version of Sinclair Lewis' "Dodsworth," showing for the last times today at the Oak Bay Theatre. Huston plays the title role of Sam Dodsworth, and Miss Chatterton has the role of Fran, the pretty, frivolous, selfish wife, whom he adores.

PLAZA THEATRE "Petticoat Fever," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's delightful filmization of the Mark Reed comedy hit which had Broadway roaring with laughter, is showing for the last times today at the Plaza. Robert Montgomery and Mryna Loy are co-starred in this picture, which proves that all good things come to those who wait . . . even to lonely wireless operators in Labrador.

DOMINION THEATRE The tragic aftermath of war is vividly reflected in the lives of the characters appearing in Bobby Breen's Dominion Theatre current starring picture, "Rainbow on the River." Nine beautiful musical number from the pens of the world's foremost composers of today and yesterday offer the boy tenor ample opportunity to demonstrate his phenomenal vocal talents.

AMUSEMENTS

CAPITOL THEATRE Lew Pollack and Sidney D. Mitchell, who wrote the hit songs for "Pigskin Parade," repeat their tune triumph with the music they composed for "One In A Million," the latest Twentieth Century-Fox musical smash, introducing Sonja Henie, currently at the Capitol Theatre.

ATLAS THEATRE Pretty nearly the same lineup of star comedians who made "The Big Broadcast of 1937" the outstanding laugh hit it was, are back in "College Holiday," the gay comedy of young love which shows for the last times today at the Atlas Theatre. They are Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen, and Louis DaPron.

NIMURA IS ONE OF BEST-KNOWN DANCERS

Today Nimura is one of the best known dancers in Europe. Wherever he goes, worshipping audiences applaud him, and the proportions of his fan mail rival that of a popular movie star. It is the unusual distinction of his personality, as well as that of his dancing that produces such results. And, happily for our own illusions, the original dramatic impression of a tall, lithe figure, gracefully set head and dark visionary eyes isn't destroyed when one sees him without the benefit of make-up, spotlights and stage trappings. That is his charm.

He still possesses the half shy, half eager manners of a school boy. After his audiences have been awed by his dancing, it is with these characteristics that he wins their hearts.

This charming artist will dance in Victoria on Tuesday next, March 2, at the Empire Theatre.

International Night Is Observed During Installation Dinner

Dr. Isabella Randall-Colyer Outlines Work of Pan-Pacific Association at Annual Banquet of Business and Professional Women's Club

COINCIDING with the International Night observed simultaneously by affiliated organizations in twenty-four different countries, the annual installation dinner of the Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club, held last night at the Empress Hotel, was an outstanding event in the club's calendar, the international aspect being emphasized in the presence of Dr. Isabella Randall-Colyer, who spoke on the work of the Pan-Pacific Women's Association.

With the traditional picturesque candle-lighting ceremony, the new officers "took over" in the presence of forty members and friends. Miss Margaret Clay was installing officer and spoke encouragingly to the new executive, of which Miss Minnie Lawson is head. Mrs. N. Hall spoke to the retiring officers.

Before sitting down to dinner, short red candles were lit and placed in front of each retiring officer and, when all were seated, the tall red candles of the new officers were lit by the retiring members and then the short candles were automatically extinguished. This was a particularly attractive ceremony and the remaining candles of the new officers, which were left burning throughout dinner, made the decoration of the table, arranged with a bowl of Japanese plum blossom and potted begonias and groups of tiny flags, very effective.

GUEST SPEAKER

Dr. Randall-Colyer, who is here from Australia in connection with the congress of the Pan-Pacific Women's Association, to be held in Vancouver from July 12 to 24, gave a resume of the work of this association, which is essentially an international body which stands for unity of purpose, the betterment of conditions for all women and good will and friendship to all nations.

The aims and objects of the association are to strengthen the bonds of peace among the people of the Pacific by promoting a better understanding and friendship among the women of all lands in or bordering on the Pacific Ocean; to initiate and promote co-operation among the women of the Pacific for the study and betterment of existing conditions, socially and industrially, in that area. The speaker outlined the programme prepared for the congress next Summer, when the general topic will be "Ways and Means for Promoting Peace."

INTERNATIONAL GREETINGS

Miss Elsie F. Richardson, convener of the international relations committee of the club, presided over the programme arranged for "International Night," the theme being "Women in Government the World Around." She brought greetings from the international president, Miss L. M. Phillips, and greetings from other countries were read by Miss M. Cameron for Great Britain; Mrs. N. Hodges, Korea; Miss L. Sylvester, Switzerland; Miss E. Parsell, Czechoslovakia; Miss E. Dodds, Germany; Mrs. B. Rose, Holland; Miss B. Crowther, Palestine; Miss E. Turley, Poland; Mrs. N. Bland, Austria; Miss M. Dobbin, Rumania; Miss N. Hodge, Belgium; Mrs. K. Farquharson, Argentina; Miss N. Roberts, New Zealand; Miss D. Fox, India; Mrs. N. Hall, Sweden; Mrs. N. Abbott, Norway; Miss Creasor, Hungary; Mrs. D. Bartholomew, Finland; Miss J. Shaw, United States; Mrs. W. E. Cushing, Italy; Mrs. M. Bland, France; Dr. Randall-Colyer, Australia, and Miss M. J. Clay, Canada.

During the evening, Mrs. Harry Lasenby sang "Little Bit of Heaven," by Ernest Ball; "Ah, Tis a Dream" (Hawley), and "Last Night" (Kjerulf). She was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Charles Conyers. Miss Richardson extended the vote of thanks to the artists and to Dr. Randall-Colyer.

Lovely corsage bouquets were received by Dr. Randall-Colyer; Mrs. Bartholomew, the retiring president; Miss Minnie Lawson, the new president; Miss Margaret Clay, Dominion vice-president of the Canadian Federation, and Mrs. Lasenby and Mrs. Conyers.

ADVERTISES NORTHWEST

Victoria to Share in Fine Newspaper Campaign in United States

The co-operation this city may expect from other points in the Northwest was outlined at a meeting of the directors of the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau yesterday by George I. Warren, commissioner. Mr. Warren reported upon a meeting of the Evergreen Playground Association in Seattle, February 15, which he had attended.

An expenditure of $31,000 for the 1937 campaign has been decided upon, he said.

Fifteen advertisements taken in The Los Angeles Times, Los Angeles Examiner, San Francisco Chronicle, San Francisco Examiner and The Oakland Tribune are of 431 column inches each. Three of these, one of forty inches and two of twelve inches, will be devoted to Victoria. The entire series runs in each paper.

WIDE COVERAGE

The San Diego Union-Tribune, Fresno Bee, Sacramento Bee, Phoenix Republican-Gazette, Salt Lake Tribune-Telegram and Honolulu Star-Bulletin have been given appropriations covering 192 column inches each. Victoria will be given two twelve-inch advertisements in each paper. In addition there will be an opening advertisement of sixty inches, sponsored by the Evergreen Playground Association in The Long Beach Press Telegram and The Pasadena Post Star News.

In The Sunset Magazine, three advertisements will be used, each covering two-thirds of a page. Two one-half page advertisements will be inserted in Motorland, official organ of the State of California Auto Club.

MAGAZINES USED

Similar insertions will be made in The National Motorist, official organ of the National Auto Club of United States, and Westways, published by the Automobile Club of Southern California.

One full page advertisement and one half-page advertisement will be taken in Life, with smaller displays in Field and Stream and National Geographic Magazines.

The advertising will be supplemented by $1,600 spent on attractive billboards in Southern California, and $4,500 in the printing and production of 50,000 booklets in which one-sixth of the space is devoted to this city and Vancouver Island.

EQUAL SHARE

Cities participating in the campaign are Seattle, Bellingham and Tacoma, Washington; Portland, Oregon, and Vancouver and Victoria, B.C. Cost is distributed on a per capita basis, and Victoria, for an expenditure of $1,500, receives equal representation with the other five cities.

The campaign will be handled by the Western Agency of Seattle, under the direction of B. N. Hutchinson. The "Ask Mr. Foster" service has been engaged in the distribution of folders and pamphlets, while C. E. Johns, secretary of the Evergreen Playground Association, and a director of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, will leave in the near future to make a contact trip in California, Arizona and Utah.

CHILDREN'S AID IS PREVENTIVE

Important Aspect of Work Lies Behind Present Appeal for $5,000

"Why is the Children's Aid Society appealing for funds?" is a question often asked," remarked one of the canvassers now engaged in the drive to raise $5,000 to carry on the society's preventive work.

"We have to point out that there is no statutory provision whereby provincial government, city or municipality are responsible for the costs of the preventive work.

"Only when guardianship is transferred to the Children's Aid Society by court order and children are legally removed from those naturally responsible for them does the "Infant Act" provide for a minimum payment of $4 per week per child, payable by the city or municipality in which the child lived, or by the provincial government for those from unorganized territory.

PREVENTIVE WORK

"There is no statutory provision for the society's preventive work, which is today its most important function. Through this service the society investigates all complaints; gives temporary care to the children in an emergency and when temporary removal from home is an aid to adjustment; gathers and prepares court evidence in cases where conditions are such that it is necessary to apply to the court for legal guardianship of children; makes a special effort on behalf of children born out of wedlock; makes the necessary investigation of child and prospective adopting parents preceding placement for adoption; co-operates with the juvenile court in the study and treatment of delinquents; and acts as an advisory agency in matters pertaining to child welfare.

"Many children have been given a fair chance and many thousands of dollars have been saved to the community because of the society's preventive work. During 1936, thirty-eight children were cared for temporarily for periods varying from days to months, and in some cases the full year, and legal commitment to the society was thereby prevented. The estimated cost to the community of raising a dependent child is $4,000. This sum, or a large part of it, is saved every time a child likely to become a public ward is prevented from becoming so. And the social value of preventive work cannot be estimated."

Cheques should be made to the Children's Aid Society, 1234 Pandora Avenue.

THE FEDERAL BUDGET

Much of the interest in any Budget is discounted beforehand, and that is the case with that now before Parliament at Ottawa. It was known in advance that there would be no reduction in taxation. The deficit had been forecast as not far short of $100,000,000, and it is approximately $87,000,000. The tariff changes that are to become effective are chiefly those made through a revised trade agreement between the Dominion and the United Kingdom.

Two of the main items which prevent the Dominion from having a balanced Budget are the deficit caused by national ownership of railways, which was $43,300,000 for the last calendar year, and grants in aid of the Provinces, which in 1936-1937 are estimated to reach $28,930,000. These burdens remain a drag on Federal finances, and while there has been an improvement in the receipts of the Canadian National Railways there is an increase in the amounts which the Dominion is advancing to help the Western Provinces to tide over their financial affairs.

The Budget as a whole is of a prosaic character, and, generally speaking, a recapitulation of figures known, at least approximately, in advance of Mr. Dunning's statement. The Minister of Finance strikes an optimistic note, coupled with a warning, about the future. The past year has been one of steady economic gains in the life of the country. That is reflected in increased revenues. There is brighter promise ahead, and Mr. Dunning believes that this time next year it will be possible to point to an even greater advance on the road to progress. His warning is in relation to stock exchange transactions. He does not want to see a fictitious boom developed in these through false standards of value. This warning is timely, for there is again a tendency to make the gambling instinct predominant in speculation.

The revision of the Anglo-Canadian Trade Treaty is marked by mutual concessions. Canada retains all the advantages of the 1932 pact, which has meant so much to her trade development. The new concessions granted to the United Kingdom will probably increase exports from there to the Dominion. The revision has been on a mutually-beneficial basis, with recognition by both Governments of the essentiality of maintaining the framework upon which the pact was engineered. This trade treaty has been of great advantage in Canada's economic recovery, and she has been benefited to a far greater extent by it than has the United Kingdom. Its perpetuation and extension is a matter of great importance to trade recovery.

How business generally is improving in the country is illustrated by the increased revenue collections from the sales and income taxes. These are unfailing barometers of economic conditions, and the fact of their progressive rise is an indication of more money being in circulation. It was increased tax collections which enabled Mr. Dunning to show a deficit in the Budget some $13,000,000 less than he anticipated. The Minister, too, estimates that the aggregate income of all the people in the country showed an increase of 10 per cent over the preceding year. He admits that in certain fields recovery is not apparent, particularly in construction, and it is in the building trades that a large proportion of unemployment is found. He wants to see this condition remedied, as he states that the construction of public works cannot continue on the present scale without leaving an intolerable burden on posterity.

INVITING CONTEMPT

In defending the defence appropriations of the British Government, Mr. Stanley Baldwin says: "The projected expenditure is solely aimed at insuring the safety of Britain and the Empire and to enable Britain to play its part in securing the peace of the world. . . . British arms will never be used for aggression but only, if necessary, for defence. The object of all parties in Britain has been and remains a single one—to maintain peace." That is the object of the $7,500,000,000 programme. Canada's $33,000,000 programme is solely for Canada, for "ourselves alone," not to assist in the defence of the Empire. The Ottawa Journal says:

"Let us try, for heaven's sake, to rid ourselves of cant. Let us rid ourselves of the notion that there is anything of dignity or self-respect in this bombastic talk of defending only ourselves; in this idea that we are asserting our 'status' in shouting to the world that, with Britain at war, we might (or could) be neutral. That sort of talk doesn't glorify us. It invites contempt; as does the notion that we should commit ourselves, in any way, to any people or league but our own."

THE POWER OF WORDS

One element lacking among our public men is versatility on the platform. Rarely, if ever, do they attempt a speech unless it deals with some political subject, which is perhaps because they take themselves so seriously and consider that they must be taken seriously by others. It is different in England, as is so aptly illustrated by the varied subjects on which Mr. Stanley Baldwin can talk and always make interesting. It is a happy augury of a departure from political speeches in Canada that Mr. J. L. Ilsley, Federal Minister of National Revenue, should have spoken before the Canadian Club at Ottawa on such a subject as the power of verbal phrases. Slogans and catchwords, he said, "have won wars, lost elections, delighted or enraged millions and made or marred many a public career."

Even within the memory of those living there have been many phrases which have played their part in the making of history. In the Great War two of these were, "a war to end war," and "make the world safe for democracy." There is another phrase associated with that struggle perhaps more memorable than either of the foregoing, namely, "Are we downhearted? No!" That phrase was the rallying cry and perhaps did something to preserve the morale of the British troops in the retreat from Mons. It was a phrase first used by Mr. Joseph Chamberlain in a public address during a time of crisis in 1906. "We are not downhearted," he said. The words appealed to the British; they had not forgotten them eight years later.

The power of the simplest of phrases, no matter how unrealizable may be what they connote, indicates the impressionability of mankind. When Jesse Collings spoke in Parliament of "Three acres and a cow," the phrase swept over the British Isles and a state of agricultural bliss was envisioned. Like McKinley's "A full dinner pale," it appealed to the imagination, just as did President Roosevelt's "A New Deal," or Mr. T. D. Pattullo's "Work and Wages." The power of words can reach the point of silliness, for perhaps the song of greatest popularity in some decades past on both sides of the Atlantic was "Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay," which was little more than a repetition of this fatuous expression over and over again.

LONDON'S MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

In the greatest city in the world there is apathy in municipal affairs. Only about 30 out of every 100 of London's ratepayers bother to vote in the municipal elections. Those elections will be held on March 4, and the fight is between the Conservatives and Laborites. The latter now control the London County Council and twenty-eight metropolitan boroughs, and have done so for the last three years. Four years previously either Conservatives or Liberals were in the majority on the council. In 1934, however, the Laborites, with a poll of 660,000 votes, wiped out the Liberals and obtained a majority of fourteen seats.

In an area of 117 square miles with a population of 4,500,000 there is an annual budget of over $200,000,000. The Laborites, in control for three years, have increased London's debt by $17,500,000. On this account they are accused of waste and extravagance. The Municipal Reformers (largely Conservatives) in the present campaign are promising sound finance, slum clearance, better education, air-raid precautions, better transport and many other reforms. The Labor programme is for reform in the system of rating, more bridges over the Thames, the extended use of the river for traffic and recreation, more parks and schools and an overhaul of the present congested transport system. If London could secure 60 per cent of the votes of its ratepayers the estimate is that Labor would be snowed under on the different borough councils and the London County Council as well.

The Winnipeg Tribune says that it is difficult for the West to get a hearing at Ottawa these days. Surely that is untrue. It has got a hearing to the tune of $30,000,000 in the last few years, and without that money the four Western Provinces would have had to face bankruptcy. Ottawa, indeed, has been the milch cow to make up the milk that the West has split through spendthrift zeal.

WIND IN THE LEAVES

The wind spoke gravely
In the tall boughs of pine:
"I have seen in a far country
An anciently-holy shrine—
Carved with the winged glories of heaven,
And plated with bright plaques of pale gold:
I have found in a far country,
A shrine beautiful to behold."

The wind spoke sadly
In the long branches of fir:
"I have been up the broad river,
Where once my forests of masts were;
Where once all the currents setting southward
Before the mad anger of my gales,
Were splendid with splendor of the morning—
Thick with a silver press of sails."

The wind spoke calmly
In the green leaves of the plane:
"All that is of man passes;
The things that are of God remain.
I have known strength, I have known beauty,
But nothing strong and fair as these—
Dark jade, bitter beryl, burning emerald
Of the tall towers of the trees."

Note and Comment

By Sandham Graves

Members of the Mainland Press visiting in the city yesterday were observed using the spiral staircase that connects the acting Premier's office with the Executive Council Chamber at the Legislative Buildings. They explained, later, that the circular motion was soothing, after studying the convolutions of provincial affairs. As a matter of record, even Cabinet Ministers have been known to use the spiral stairs, after facing delegations imploring the Province to economize but spend more in their ridings, simultaneously.

Automatic telephones are too perfect. They never slip. In the old days it restored the complacence of a busy man to find that other people were not perfect, and sometimes gave him a wrong number. Now the wrong number comes back home with a buzz. I know one man who, soon after the change in the system here, called a number continuously on the automatic system for ten minutes only to discover at the end of that time he was dialing the number of the machine he was using. He never really recovered either. Now when he approaches a telephone, he grasps it with both hands, clamps the instrument between his elbows, and dials a number with the grim determination of a man who would lose his life rather than make another mistake. I would suggest a "Wrong Number Day" to the proprietors of automatic telephone systems, to restore the self-esteem of mankind once every year. No machine ought to be perfect, because man will never reach that stage of efficiency.

Many people believe that the City of Victoria should be congratulated on its present activities in removing every second tree on some boulevards. Under the handicap that some large varieties of trees planted have grown up into the wires and down into the sewers, this policy should at least halve that loss. Now if the corporation could see its way clear to going one step further by gradually replacing the remaining trees with smaller species and with flowering shrubs, that, in my humble opinion, would be a definite gain. Holly, rhododendron, and many other types grow well in Victoria, and make a distinctive showing wherever they have already been planted. There is less quarrel with Japanese plum, copper beach, lilac, and laburnum trees; and these, one sees with pleasure, are coming more into the picture in the city. After all, the forest is the place for big timber.

A convention of the Junior Chamber of Commerce held here the other day emphasized the fact that young, aggressive men are, in the main, identified with these organizations, and that the title of "Junior" is becoming somewhat outgrown. It is a fact that the war of 1914-18 removed the best part of a generation of men who today would have acted as a link between those who are starting and those who are finishing their active business lives. Inevitably, that has left gaps. Now nature is healing the wound, and a more normal state of affairs can be resumed. There will always be need of a wise blend between age and experience on the one hand, and youth and energy on the other. It is a practical form of co-operation, dealing with human needs. Chambers of Commerce, or Boards of Trade to give them their British name, can play an increasingly important part in their respective communities if they will dig down to the facts, set their vision forward, freely admit any mistakes, and discriminate between what is practical and what is mere window-dressing in the maintenance of a false front. British Columbia has this human material, and it will be interesting to see it in action as the years go on.

It is a curious fact that we as a people demand proof of financial responsibility from truck drivers, but neglect to see to the mental responsibility of those whom we elect to office and place in charge of taxation.

INDUSTRY IN B.C. PLEASED

Lumber, Fish and Fruit Operations All Benefit From Extension of Agreement

Continuation of British preference in the United Kingdom market for Canadian products, including lumber, canned salmon and apples, with assurance of stability in this trade until 1940 was welcome news for three major industries in the Province yesterday.

Provincial departments in touch with these industries expressed gratification at the extension of the present agreement between Britain and Canada in respect to timber products, fisheries and agriculture.

IS BIG MARKET

Lumber sales in the United Kingdom market have proved in the last few years to be the bulk of a waterborne export volume now exceeding 1,000,000,000 board feet annually. Last year Great Britain ordered 660,000,000 feet of British Columbia softwoods, compared with less than 90,000,000 feet in 1931.

Agriculturists saw direct benefit from continuation of the preference on apples, a real factor in the Okanagan Valley, and indirectly in the increased quotas for bacons and hams, which will relieve some pressure on the Canadian livestock markets domestically.

The fishery industry was pleased at renewal of the canned salmon preference, a substantial factor in British Columbia exports in the last few years.

FREIGHTS MAY RISE

As world trade expands, stiffening in water freights may have a bearing on British Columbia exports, but that phase of the question will be examined when it arises, it was commented.

Officially, the British Columbia Government said the Province was pleased at the renewal of the trade agreement, but would require time to examine the Federal announcement in detail before being more explicit in comment here.

H. R. MacMillan, Mainland lumberman, said the Empire agreement, particularly with the United Kingdom, was the mainstay of the British Columbia lumber industry. Assurance of continuation of its preferences until 1940 was welcome, he declared.

DIED AT NANAIMO

The time used is Pacific standard for the 120th Meridian west. It is counted from 0 to 24 hours, from midnight to midnight. The figures for height serve to distinguish high water from low water. Where blanks occur in the table, the tide rises or falls continuously during two successive tidal periods without turning.

The height is in feet and tenths of a foot, measured from the average level of low water.

To find the depth of water on the sill of the Esquimalt drydock, add 18.8 feet to the height of high water as above given.

FIFTY YEARS AGO TODAY

(From The Daily Colonist of February 27, 1887)

News From Ontario—The postoffice savings bank returns for the month of January is the most satisfactory that has been published since the establishment of the system. The amount deposited during the month was $753,869. 1887, was $1,311,600, showing an increase over the same time last year of $2,250,000. Edwin Switzer, contractor and builder at St. Catherines, fell from the roof of a house in the course of construction and was killed. Mrs. Robinson of the town line of Lobo and London, died at the age of 90 years. She was one of the first settlers of Lobo, and had remained there ever since, being highly respected by all who knew her.

The Fur Yield—It is anticipated that there will be a very large output of fure this season from Chilcotin, and the Horsefly country, the deep snow on the hills having driven the wild animals in plenty into the valleys. D. English is reported as having secured over thirteen hundred lynx skins.

Will Nominate Candidates—The nomination of candidates in Vancouver district for election to the Dominion House of Commons will take place at Nanaimo tomorrow.

Today's Selections

Some important sport events are on today's calendar, locally, in the East, in the South, and on the Mainland, so I am going to try and pick the majority of the winners. This afternoon local First Division football swings back into action after a long lay-off, one which dates back to the early part of December. Victoria West, unbeaten so far this season in league competition, face Victoria City in the first of a doubleheader at the Athletic Park. I will give the Wests the game by the odd goal. In the second game, Esquimalt takes on Saanich Thistles. Take the points, you Saanich footballers. This evening at the Armories several Island badminton champions will be crowned. Well, I will just deal with the singles. I like Margaret Taylor, former Canadian champion, from Kelowna, to lift the women's crown, and give the men's honors to lanky Eric Leney, of Duncan. Over in Vancouver the Varsity cagers and Province meet in the first of a five-game series to see which club tackles the Dominoes in the British Columbia final. My vote goes to the Newsies this evening. Two National League ice games are set in the East, Montreal Maroons will beat Toronto Leafs and the Canadiens will win from the Americans. Then there is the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap in California. I picked Red Rain earlier this week and will stick by it, although I may be "miles" out when the winner is named.—J.D.

Color

Have you ever considered what a great part "color" plays in our every-day lives? For instance: You see "red" when angered; you are "green" with envy; "white" with fear; "blue" with cold; you are "yellow" if you're a coward; "purple" with rage; you blush "pink"; are "black" with gloom, and you often go into a "brown" study . . . really we live quite a colorful existence!—R.F.G.

Badminton Is Popular

Between 75,000 and 80,000 persons are playing badminton in Canada, according to officials of the Canadian Badminton Association, who are here en route to Vancouver for the Dominion championships next week. . . . W. Keenan, president, from Ottawa, and J. L. Johnston, secretary, from Winnipeg, are participating in the Vancouver Island championships now in progress at the Bay Street Armories. . . . Badminton has become a young person's game during the last ten years, in the opinion of the Canadian officials. More young people are playing the game today than ten years ago. —S.T.

Coronation Stamps

My friend the philatelist tells me that a special Coronation issue, which is to consist only of sets of three denominations in one common design, will be issued by the Crown Colonies, and will be on sale from May 12 to December 31, when all remainders will be withdrawn from issue and destroyed. . . . The stamps will be of the same size and shape as the 1935 Silver Jubilee issue of Great Britain, and will be printed in single colors. The design of the stamps includes portraits of both King George and Queen Elizabeth in a setting of Coronation emblems, including the crown, orb, sword of state and sceptres . . . An unknown friend has asked for the colors of motor licences of cars entering this province from other states and provinces. Should he see this note, and if he will send in his name, the writer will be pleased to have the information he requires sent to him.—B.G.

"Fender" Plays Market

"Are you playing the market like 90 per cent of the population?" we asked "Fender," the Yates Street taxi driver. "I sure am," the car pilot answered. "I have a large pile of cement sacks home worth six cents each. I'm waiting for the market to rise to ten cents before unloading my stock," he grinned. "Spike," the dispatcher, had very little to say about speculation. We suspect that he lost his trousers on Hedley Amalgamated . . . Early Thursday morning we saw an illustration of the march of time on Government Street, near Fisgard. Along the street in a northerly direction a 1937 coupe sizzled past at what looked like sixty miles per hour. Behind roared and clattered a model T, wide open at thirty-five. After the ancient chariot a man pedaled a bicycle at five miles per hour. . . . Behind the bicycle came a pedestrian. After the pedestrian G. B. waddled along at about half a mile per hour. . . . "Firemen don't know what a soft job they have nowadays," mused an old-timer, who was a fire-fighter in the horse and buggy era. "When I was a fireman," he added, "we received $55 per month and out of that had to support our families and buy suitable clothing to stand smoke, flame and water. Many of Victoria's fire halls had only two firemen on duty at a time to handle horses and equipment. Sometimes the smaller halls were left in charge of one man while the other had a few hours off. Well do I remember the day when a Government Street shop bought up a lot of old army coats heavily decorated with brass buttons. Practically every fireman in the city visited the store to get himself one. We had our uniforms then, but still had to buy our own rubber boots, oilskins and hats. Those may have been the days, but I would hate to go back to them," he grinned.—G.B.

Ask Me Another

One cannot but help being amused at the scene which often occurs on Fort Street between Government and Douglas Streets as a street car precariously makes its way past the line of cars parked along the curb. As invariably happens, a truck or automobile is parked just a little too far from the curb, with the result that the tram is unable to pass, thus blocking traffic. This seems to create quite a debatable subject. Why in the first place, was Fort Street built so narrow, or why were the street car tracks laid so close to one side of the street?—W.I.F.

MISDIRECTED FIRE

Sir,—That the misdirected fire from a Spanish gunner's piece should be termed "an act of God" seems a new departure for British naval officers.

If policy dictated the onus be placed elsewhere than the source of origin, why not blame the occult machinations of the devil and be nearer the mark? This refers to a news item in today's issue of your paper regarding the landing of a Spanish shell on the deck of a British warship. F. GALLEY.

PRELATES AND PEOPLE

Sir,—To wind up that sorry yarn, of which the disentangling was begun in a former letter, namely, Mr. Glanville Carew's diatribe on prelates and people—common or garden Englishmen, just a word more:

While charging that the church draws revenue from property in immoral districts of London, Mr. Carew fails to say anything of what is being done through the agencies of that church in rebuilding those slums, in reforming the lives of that submerged tenth by giving them homes in which cleanliness and chastity are at least possible, or to mention the fact that the chief authorities of that church at which he throws filthiness are foremost in that good work. To keep a church headquarters going a certain overhead expenditure is unavoidable. How great this may be is well known to the moderator of the United Church of Canada as to the Primate of England.

Neither in the Homeland nor overseas is there any longer, among true church people, that tenseness of jealous bitterness and unkindly criticism, as insinuated by this paragraphist. On the contrary, among Christians the world over there is plainly evident a warm feeling of sympathy and love towards the mother churches — the Catholic churches of England and of Scotland. So much is this the case that many from outside communions are responding heartily to the rallying cry, "Back to the church of our fathers, the church of the Living God." Forgetting those so petty things that sever us, we remember only that His essential unity calls for a corresponding union among ourselves—His Christian soldiers, fighting under His banner—before, to us, in His name, and through his mighty power working in us, shall come the victory.

Unless Christians not only pray, but work with all their might, for that ideal, "united church"; unless we forget or forego our puny pride, our piffling preferences, and put behind our back that petty prejudice, that innate but foolish belief that loves to linger and lie at the bottom of most human minds, saying, "I am right, and, therefore, that other fellow is essentially and absolutely wrong," can we at all justly be named "Christians," after our Master, The Christ, who is not only the truth, but also the embodied love of the Father, for us His brethren, whose command to us is "That ye love one another, even as I have loved you." In his own mind each one of us must place before that Holy Name as applied to Him an adjective, either the world "loyal" or "apostate." Which do you choose? You will be a loyal Christian. Which goes before my Christian name? Would I smile to be called an apostate?

Who are we, and what worth? And have we any right at all to take our Master's glorious name for ours if we forget "the Master's call" to God for us? It runs in these fervent words: "Neither for these only do I pray, but for them also that believe on Me through their word; that they may all be one . . . that the world may believe that thou didst send Me."

This is the acid test of loyalty: Do we obey His command, "Love ye one another?" Do we, in true humility and sincerity, work for and are we ready and glad to make large sacrifices to bring about that unity—His last and greatest petition to the Father before He "went forth over the brook Kidron, where was a garden?"

CULBERTSON on CONTRACT

By Ely Culbertson

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

In the case of those hands which offer alternate lines of play, the crux is not merely to choose one over the other (assuming that neither has an appreciable edge), but to be consistent after selecting. I have seen a great many cases in which either one of two plans would succeed if followed up logically and consistently. Vacillation, however, is rarely successful, and to take one feature from this plan and another from that is the height of something or other.

In the hand shown below the declarer chose to commit himself to a certain line of play. This would have been all right except for his subsequent inconsistencies.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH
♠ A 10 7
♥ A K Q 5
♦ K J 2
♣ A 7 3

WEST
♠ K 8 6 3 2
♥ 10 9
♦ 10 9 8
♣ Q 5 4

EAST
♠ J 5 4
♥ J 6 3 2
♦ 7 5 4 3
♣ 10 6

SOUTH
♠ Q 9
♥ 8 7 4
♦ A Q 6
♣ K J 9 8 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the diamond ten, which declarer won in his own hand. A low trump was then led to dummy's ace and on a trump return, East following with the ten, declarer went into a long, agonizing huddle as to whether to finesse. Finally, he chose to lay down the club king. To his disappointment, the queen did not drop, and, when three rounds of hearts which followed disclosed that East could stop the fourth round, declarer felt that fate had treated him badly.

West ruffed in on the third heart with the club queen, and exited with a diamond. Eventually the spade had to be conceded for the slam's defeat.

Whether or not declarer should have finessed for the queen of clubs is a close point. The finesse might well have succeeded where every other plan would fail. But on declarer's actual play of the ace and king of trumps the slam still was there on consistent handling. Declarer should have seen that there was a good chance that hearts would not break, and that, therefore, he would find no place for the discard of his losing spade. It should have been simplicity itself to have taken a little insurance against a bad heart break. All that was necessary was to strip the diamonds from the North-Sound hands and then to lead out the ace, king and queen of hearts. If these went through, the fourth heart would provide a discard for declarer's low spade. If they did not, the holder of the club queen could be put on lead, and, unless he were so fortunate as to have the thirteenth diamond, he would be forced to lead a spade to North's and South's combined tenace. This one more opportunity created by sound play would have resulted in the fulfilment of the contract.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Question—The bidding has been:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What should South rebid with the following:

♠ A 8 ♥ K Q 7 ♦ 10 8 7 6 ♣ K J 9 7

Answer—Two no trump.

MARINE, RAIL and AIR

COMING HERE FROM ORIENT

Empress of Russia Will Dock Here About 11 o'Clock This Morning

Inbound from the Philippines by way of China and Japan ports, the Canadian Pacific liner Ss. Empress of Russia, Captain J. F. Patrick, will dock here today. According to advices received at the local office of Canadian Pacific Steamships yesterday the Russia is running behind time and will not reach William Head until 10 o'clock this morning. This should bring the ship up alongside Rithet Pier by 11 o'clock. The Russia has passengers, mails and cargo for Victoria.

OUTBOUND SHIP

Taking up the American Mail Line schedule, the Ss. President Grant, Captain H. B. Clark, U.S.N.R., commander, is due alongside Rithet Piers on her way to Orient ports this afternoon. The liner is taking out a fair passenger list and a heavy cargo of general merchandise. She is scheduled to leave here at 6 o'clock for Yokohama, her first port of call.

FROM ENGLAND

The Furness Line Ms. Pacific Reliance was here yesterday morning with passengers and freight from the United Kingdom. Passengers aboard the Reliance included Mr. and Mrs. H. Bennie, from Scotland, who landed here to visit relatives, and Miss Mary Osborne, who returned to her home in Esquimalt after a visit to the Old Country.

SPECIAL TRIP

On a special round trip to San Francisco, the American Mail Line Ss. President Jackson sailed from Seattle last evening. She will return to Seattle on March 5 and will sail for the Orient on March 13. Among the Jackson's passengers going south was Ronald Cruickshanks, of the staff of the Imperial Bank, who is making the voyage.

Is Attempting to Make Long Flight In Quickest Time

CROYDON, Feb. 26 (AP).—Flying Officer David Llewellyn took off at 8:48 a.m. (12:48 a.m. P.S.T.) today for a round-trip flight to Capetown.

Llewellyn, son of Sir William Llewellyn, president of the Royal Academy of Arts, said he would attempt to make the flight in four days and break existing records.

PUZZLED

"You never t-take the s-slightest interest in anything I do," sobbed the young bride.

"Now, don't be unreasonable, darling," said the new husband. "All last night I lay awake wondering what you had put in that cake you made yesterday."

SQUADRONS INCREASED

Programme of Expansion Adds Two More Planes to Each Unit

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Important feature of the programme of Royal Air Force expansion, which is aimed to bring the total strength in first-line aircraft of the service—Metropolitan, Fleet Air Arm, and overseas squadrons—up to some 2,500 airplanes, backed by full war reserves, is an increase in individual squadron armament. All fighter squadrons, formerly restricted to twelve first-line aircraft, now have fourteen. Heavy bomber squadrons, with former complement of ten first-line airplanes, now have twelve. Flying-boat squadron strength has gone up from four to six. Each of the new general reconnaissance squadrons has eighteen first-line airplanes, which is the largest squadron complement since the war.

Hence the increase that has already been achieved in the strength of the service is considerably greater than is apparent from the number of new squadrons added since expansion was begun. Further, the increased size of individual units means economy of administration, and considerable operational advantages. One effect is that the number of new squadrons to be formed is reduced from the figure originally contemplated, because the desired first-line strength will be attained at a lower figure.

HAS LAGGED SOMEWHAT

The new year finds the aircraft industry fairly launched on the large-scale production of the high-performance monoplanes needed to implement the expansion programme. Up to the present aero engine building has kept in front of schedule, but airframe construction has lagged somewhat, due to adoption of fundamentally new methods of construction and need for complete requipment and large expansion of workshops. Henceforward, the curve of output of the new planes, which include the world's fastest and most formidable fighting and bombing aircraft, will rise week by week, and before long will be sufficient to meet all requirements.

Sir Thomas Inskip, Minister for the Co-ordination of Defence, has spoken with admiration of the way in which the airframe constructing industry has met an abnormal and infinitely complex situation without substantial delays in production; 1937 will see the last of the inevitable delays overtaken and the whole gigantic machinery of research, design and manufacture working smoothly and rapidly to provide Great Britain with an air force second to none in the world in technical efficiency and striking power.

Planes Were Different Then

A Curtis-Wright biplane, photographed at Edmonton in 1911 by J. S. Srigley, who is a visitor to Victoria at present. Mr. Srigley stated yesterday that the machine was flown by a pilot named Robinson, who had a Frenchman as an assistant. They visited Edmonton in the course of a "barnstorming" tour, a favorite occupation of pilots when flying was very much in its infancy. Note the airy arrangement of the pilot's seat and the absence of any instrument board.

APPEALED TO PARLIAMENT

Seamen on Freighter Linaria Failed in Demand for "Protection"

BOSTON, Feb. 26 (AP).—A group of seamen met today in the fo'castle of the British freighter Linaria, and reaffirmed their demand to be relieved of transporting nitrate to Fascists in war-torn Spain. A stay-in strike prevented the steamer from sailing last night, and they decided to continue it.

They had just received word from London that their appeal to Parliament "to protect us in our right not to ship war materials to Fascist Spain," had failed.

Yesterday, their appeal to Hugh A. Ford, British consul-general at Boston, and the British Board of Trade, met failure.

They decided to maintain their demand for honorable discharge and passage back to England, with pay. They also decided they would sign off the articles under protest, and through their union would sue the owners for damages. Their captain, Joseph Robinson, cabled to England to obtain permission to discharge the men.

OVER MILLION LICENCES NOW

Canadians Take Out More Radio Permits in Current Fiscal Year

For the first time, the number of radio lincences issued in Canada has gone over the million mark, according to E. J. Haughton, division superintendent Department of Transport.

At the end of 1935-36 fiscal year, the total number of licences was 862,109. Up to February 15, and with some time still to go, the figures were 1,003,052. Every province in Canada has issued more licences than in the former fiscal period. Ontario is the leading province with 413,265 as against former figures of 342,056.

In British Columbia the licences issued so far this fiscal year totalled 89,547, as against 80,205 in 1935-36. Montreal is the leading city with 132,007, with Toronto second 118,399. Vancouver is in third place with 46,522. Victoria now has 10,616 licences in force, as against 9,937 in 1935-36.

Blind persons have been issued so far this year 2,712 licences free of charge, as against 2,314 in the preceding fiscal year.

ATTORNEY IS NOT ADVERSE

Enforcement of Copeland Act May Be Deferred for Some Time

SEATTLE, Feb. 26 (AP).—United States Attorney J. Charles Dennis said today it was possible no further action would be taken to enforce the seamen's discharge-book clause of the Copeland Safety-at-Sea Act in Seattle and other Washington ports until the United States Congress deliberates proposed changes in the law.

Three maritime unions, charging the books permit operators to blacklist them, have obtained orders in all major coast ports temporarily restraining the Government from enforcing the clause.

Leroy E. Kuhns, district United States shipping commissioner here, must show cause tomorrow before Federal District Judge John C. Bowed why the temporary order should not be made permanent.

Dennis said he was not adverse to a postponement of the action. "If postponement will mean that shipping is to continue unrestrained," Dennis said, "I am willing to defer action."

DIVIDING UP SALVAGE JOB

Portland and Victoria Concerns Will Share Work on Motorship Feltre

PORTLAND, Feb. 26 (AP).—The United States steamboat inspector's office said today the Federal hearing into the Columbia River crash between the Italian motorship Feltre and the American freighter, Edward Luckenbach, had been postponed until Monday.

The "B" board of the Federal Bureau of Navigation had planned to start the probe today.

Thomas H. White, of New York, agent for a committee of Trieste, Italy, underwriters, said work of repairing and raising the sunken Feltre will start immediately. The work will be done by the Columbia River Salvage Company, of Portland, and the Pacific Salvage Company, of Victoria, B.C. The cost will be divided among ship and cargo underwriters.

The Italian vessel is deck-deep in thirty-three feet of water off Prescott, forty miles down the river from Portland.

As on Thursday, when the registering began, there was no let-up of applicants yesterday between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., when the sittings concluded.

Messrs. Kerr and Harrison were to leave for Vancouver last night.

SHIP BACK ON ATLANTIC RUN

French Line Ss. De Grasse Returning to Service in Cabin Class

One of the first large cabin-class ships to be put into service on the North Atlantic, and one of the most popular of the French Line steamers ever to ply between Harve and New York, the Ss. De Grasse will be returned to trans-Atlantic service when she sails from Harve on May 29. On June 9 she leaves New York for Boston, Queenstown (Ireland), Southampton and Harve, according to advices received by the Empire Shipping Company, Limited, British Columbia general agents for the French Line.

The De Grasse has been completely renovated, and is, in fact, practically a new ship. Passengers will be delighted with the many new features she offers. Two fine swimming-pools, for example, have been installed, one in-doors and one out-doors, so that aquatic sport is possible in any weather. The salon, smoking-room, and bar have been renovated. A reduction has been made in carrying capacity in order to increase space and facilities for the comfort and enjoyment of passengers.

The cabin class dining-room has also been entirely redecorated. The staterooms have been enlarged and are equipped with private shower, toilet and all modern accessories. Tourist class has also been revamped, and now occupies former cabin class quarters, being centrally located on top decks.

POPULARIZING DINING-CARS

Travelers on C.N.R. Trains Now Have Own Choice of Foods

MONTREAL, Feb. 26.—Travelers who prefer to order their meals on the a la carte basis in dining-cars of the Canadian National Railways, will now have the benefit of a considerable reduction in prices, according to W. W. Swinden, general superintendent of sleeping and dining-car services of the company, in an announcement today.

While some travelers order meals of the table d'hote variety, a combination meal at a fixed price, many other patrons prefer to be served dishes that suit their particular fancy on the a la carte principle, and to these the revised prices will particularly appeal. These reductions in price, ranging from 20 to over 30 per cent. will apply to the usual variety of dishes found on the menu and will result in considerable saving to those with an eye for economy.

These reduced prices are being placed in effect with every regard to the high standard of service which prevails on Canadian National dining-cars and are designed to further popularize the dining-car services, stated Mr. Swinden.

Little Stories for Bedtime

Happy Days

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

Isn't it a pity that the whole world cannot be just that way all the time? Of course it is. And if each one of us would just try never to make anybody else unhappy it would be that way. It was that way on the Green Meadows and in the Green Forest and around the Smiling Pool. Everybody was happy. You see, not once since Farmer Brown's Boy had put up his signs on the big chestnut tree in the Green Forest, on the big hickory tree beside the Smiling Pool, and on the old fence beside the dear Old Brier Patch, had a hunter with a terrible gun been seen. And not a single trap had been found. Those signs had given warning that whoever hunted or trapped would get into trouble.

And so, because of Farmer Brown's Boy and what he had done, these were happy days for the little meadow and forest people. To be sure, Danny Meadoy Mouse had to keep his wits about him every miute so as not to furnish a dinner for one of those always looking for him, but he was used to that, and, as he often says, "Half the fun in life is saving it."

To be sure, Peter Rabbit always had to have at least one eye open and one ear cocked for Reddy or Granny Fox or Old Man Coyote, but, as Peter says, "It is good for my wits and keeps them sharp."

To be sure, Mrs. Grouse never made a move without first looking this way and looking that way and listening with all her might, lest Reddy Fox spring from behind a tree or fierce Mr. Goshawk swoop from the tree-tops, but as she has frequently remarked, she "enjoys the spice of excitement."

It was just the same with everybody. Watching out for each other was part of life, and each felt quite smart enough to take care of himself, which is just as Old Mother Nature intended. It is only the hunter with his terrible gun and dreadful traps who brings constant fear, and nothing makes great unhappiness than constant fear. So, now that the hunter no longer came, and now that Farmer Brown's Boy no longer set traps, everybody was happy, for everybody could go about his own business in his own way.

So Peter Rabbit merrily kicked up his heels and laughed at Reddy Fox when he scratched his nose on a sly old bramble at the edge of the dear Old Brier Patch. Chatterer the Red Squirrel made faces and scolded at Black Pussy, Farmer Brown's cat, who should have known better than to try to catch him. Jimmy Skunk ambled about, paying no attention to anybody, Jerry Muskrat put the finishing touches on his house for the Winter. Bobby Coon curled himself up to sleep most of the time in his hollow tree and didn't once dream that it was being cut down. Mrs. Grouse enjoyed her meals in comfort. Reddy Fox actually teased Bowser the Hound to chase him just for the fun of fooling him when he had had enough exercise. Little Joe Otter splashed and played in the Laughing Brook and the Smiling Pool right in broad daylight, and didn't care who saw him. Happy Jack Squirrel hunted for nuts almost under the nose of Farmer Brown's Boy.

To be sure, Mrs. Grouse never made a move without first looking this way and looking that way

Oh, these were happy days, very happy days. And all because Farmer Brown's Boy had learned to love the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows and had helped them in the very best way he could—by stopping hunting and trapping them himself and by stopping others from doing so. Don't you think he would have felt very happy himself if he could have known how happy he had made others? But there was no one to tell him except Tommy Tit the Chickadee, who did his best, and he wasn't at all sure that Farmer Brown's Boy understood.

Next story: Timid Danny Meadow Mouse.

ISSUE REPORT ON B.C. MINE

Provincial Mines Department Publishes Summary on Nicola Property

Without explanation, the Provincial Mines Department yesterday issued a report by M. S. Hedley on the properties owned by Nicola Mines & Metals, Ltd., a British Columbia company capitalized at $2,500,000, in 5,000,000 shares of 50c each. After summarizing the geology of the area and the history of development of the properties, the report gave the following consulsions:

"Conclusions: This property is dependent upon the Enterprise vein. Of the other veins investigations to date have not shown that any considerable tonnage is to be derived from them. The Tubal Cain is a weakly-mineralized shear-zone of no great prospective value. The Joshua vein contains shoots that are minable at good metal prices, but tonnage from these will be low and necessary development work fairly high. The Planet vein is little known and the shaft is not particularly encouraging, even in view of some high assays obtainable.

"This vein might be prospected on the surface by reliable geophysical methods to give an idea of the continuity of the vein fracture, and to indicate position of the vein and depth of overburden as a preparatory step to stripping where cover is not too heavy. Extensive development of such a vein is needed before any estimate can be made of tonnage and values because, as is obvious, minable ore is bound to occur in shoots which are not likely to be very large or continuous.

"The King William vein has promise, particularly when it is considered that it is probably the southern continuation of the Enterprise vein. It is not wide, but if as good as the known section of the Enterprise vein there is to be expected a considerable extension of minable ground. It is likely that over-burden is too deep for economic stripping. The present condition of the 320-foot level is not good for the necessary long tram that would result in the continuation of the Enterprise drift to the south.

"A glance at the general plan shows a tendency to convergence of the Enterprise, Tubal Cain and Joshua veins both downward on the dip and to the south. An estimate of the actual location of the point of convergence is of little value, particularly in depth, because this point will vary in each section drawn, and it is even possible that there is no such convergence within economically reached limits. There is no reason, moreover, to believe that a convergence would mean a large or rich ore body; in any event, the matter is one for investigation at a considerably removed date.

"In the Enterprise workings development must be pushed aggressively in order that there is an assured tonnage for the mill to operate at present capacity. The new 675-foot level is now being developed and the southern extension on the lower levels should be investigated. Although the vein is not commercial on the 320-foot level north, this section has not been explored at depth; because of the rapid changes in vein-structure and of widths and value this northern section should again be investigated from, probably best, the 675-foot level in the hope that ore-shoots may be found.

"The life of the mine and success of the enterprise is dependent upon systematized, efficient operation at low costs and accompanied by an active programme of development. Mill-heads are at present so low as to put the operation into the marginal class. The grade of mill-feed could doubtless be increased by the adoption of a different method of extraction that would allow of cleaner, more selective mining. It is unlikely that increased milling capacity is warranted," the report concluded.

WILL RESIGN UNLESS SUPPORT COMPLETE

hand tactics, are inocently playing into the insurgents' hands, he charged.

SPIES IN CAMP

"Enemy espionage is being achieved within our own camp with a view to causing intrigues," the Premier declared.

At this point he referred to pacifying efforts of "certain governments with interests opposed to those of the Fascist powers," charging that they, too, were being exploited by the forces working to overturn the Spanish democracy.

MADRID, Feb. 26 (AP).—General Jose Miaja, commander of the defence forces which have kept the insurgents at bay around Madrid for three months, has been given command of all Government forces in Central Spain, it was announced tonight.

OVER WIDE FRONT

General Miaja's new command extends over 325 miles of front. In addition to the lines close to Madrid it includes the El Escorial, Guadarrama and Somo-Sierra fronts, northwest of Madrid, and the Guadalajara region, to the northeast, all of which have been under command of General Sebastian Pozas.

The new commander expressed certainty that "the rebels have failed completely to cut the communications of Madrid with the Eastern Provinces."

"The Fascists will never capture Madrid," he declared, "because we have an enthusiastic army and an enduring civilian population ready for all sacrifices."

NOT ON HILLCREST

Government fire concentrated from flank positions on Pinzarron Hill, strategic Jarma front point, dominating the Valencia - Madrid highway, failed to disclose insurgents holding command of the hillcrest.

Sporadic fighting on other sectors west and north of Madrid, was reported.

(Insurgent reports at Avila declared the general Government offensive around Madrid had collapsed after an entire battalion of militiamen was annihilated near the Segovia Bridge, west of Madrid. Dispatches from the capital did not mention such an engagement.)

FIGHT FROM SEWERS

BAYONNE, France, Feb. 26 (AP).—The insurgent defenders of Oviedo fought on doggedly tonight from the very sewers of the ancient city, pushed underground by six days of basque attack.

Their machine guns spat back at Government attackers from the entrances to the dank, arched stone passages, high enough for a man to walk through in upright position. They were laid centuries ago.

Other insurgents held out in the Fourteenth Century Gothic Cathedral. In the chapels of the edifice lie the bones of Tenth Century kings and princes, and in the adjacent Camara Santa, the original primitive chapel of San Miguel, were placed the sacred relics brought from Toledo at the time of the Moorish invasion. The fate of these relics, kept in an oak and silver chest, is not known.

SCOTT'S SCRAPBOOK - - - - By R. J. Scott

Remember When

(Twenty-Five Years Ago)

Victoria's seventh Pacific Coast League hockey game will be played at the Arena tonight. Vancouver is the visiting septette, and they expect to make the Capitals earn anything they get. Of course the local optimistic fan will agree that Victoria is the probable winner of tonight's match, and indeed he has every reason to believe such. When the Terminals and the homesters are battling for supremacy there is no Westminster hoodoo hovering about, and as a general thing the locals are able, not easily though, to emerge at the long end of the score. Of the five games which Victoria has played against Vancouver, they have four victories to their credit, and they are just as anxious to make it five, believing confidently that they can do it, and do it tonight, too. There is always that chance, however, which makes real sport what it is, interesting, fascinating, uncertain, that the locals will not repeat, although one thing is sure, that they will make every effort to come out ahead this evening.

A full and an enthusiastic meeting of the swimmers of the local Young Men's Christian Association was held Thursday evening. Resignation of Mr. G. Kiddie, as vice polo captain, was accepted. It's no trouble at all. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking is needed—a child could do it.

Now get 2½ ounces of Pinex into a 16 oz. bottle, and add your syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of really superior cough remedy—more than you could buy for four times the money. It keeps perfectly, tastes fine, and lasts a family a long time.

This splendid home mixture has a three-fold action. You can feel it take hold at once. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. This explains why it gives such prompt, pleasing results.

Ball and Fashion Show Enjoyed by Large Crowd

Wool Suits and Smart Bathing Togs Are Modeled At Successful Dance Arranged by Tuberculous Veterans at Empress Hotel

The ball and fashion show held last evening at the Empress Hotel by the Tuberculous Veterans' Section, Branch 18, Canadian Legion, was a most entertaining and enjoyable affair, the ballroom being filled with a happy throng of dancers. His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Eric W. Hamber attended later in the evening, and Mrs. Hamber was presented with a bouquet of flowers by Mrs. D. W. Burnett, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

Dancing to the music of the hotel orchestra commenced at 9 o'clock and continued until 1 o'clock this morning. At 11 o'clock the fashion parade began, showing the latest in woolen suits and beach wear as produced by the Jantzen Company in Vancouver.

The hats worn with the suits were lent through the courtesy of the Hudson's Bay Company; advanced millinery styles featured chapeaux with lower crowns, felts and straws topping the list in materials. In the felt hats, coronation and pastel shades predominated. The straw hats worn by the mannequins ranged from the smallest to the largest in brims and included in the fashions were the pancake, turban, glorified beret, Spanish sailor and off-the-face halo.

All the hats were worn at an angle to show the hair at the side and back. Draped veils were worn as trimmings and also were worn over the face, reminiscent of the gay 'nineties.

WOOLEN SUITS

A spa green three-piece suit modeled by Miss Thelma Ackerman was of ripple nub yarn, the coat made in loose box-style. Miss Faith Cuming also was seen in a three-piece suit of white boucle yarn bordered with black and white. With this she wore a very large white felt hat. Champion gold was the color of the charming two-piece dress of fine botany wool, trimmed with brown suede belt and bow. This was worn by Miss Mary Lindgren, who later appeared in a three-piece suit of white diagonal weave fabric, finished with a kid belt. Her topcoat was single-breasted with raglan sleeves.

Miss Lois Pendray appeared in a yellow two-piece boucle suit in a fancy lace stitch, with hand-embroidery on the blouse. Over it she wore a three-quarter-length coat, made with wide full-length revers, on which patch pockets were stitched. A French coral two-piece dress of ripple nub yarn was worn by Miss Peggy Gelling, the trimming being crystal buttons. Suit coats featured the new shoulder fullness.

An attractive two-piece dress of fine botany wool, worn by Miss Elsie Finlayson was made in the shade of St. James Rose and was hand-embroidered. It was made with a high collar, with wine-colored ties, these also fastened the novelty belt. The material was woven in half-inch ribbing. A three-piece suit worn by Miss Lillian Frumento was of blonde beige woven in fine botany, and was made with a shawl collar.

BATHING SUITS

The bathing suits showed a more feminine trend in style, with accentuated pointed brassieres. A skirtless one-piece sunburst mio suit of Bermuda green was strikingly worn by Miss Molly Unsworth and, in contrast, a swing suit in colors of red, white and blue, finished with a very wide belt, was worn by Miss Finlayson. An ensemble in white with red and black-striped border was shown by Miss Lindgren, consisting of a two-piece swim suit with a sweater.

A gingham lastex rio suit of red and black was among the more unusual things, and was modeled by Miss Pendray. A novelty cherio mio suit of platinum, trimmed with red buttons, was worn by Miss Ackerman. This had a detachable skirt also finished with red buttons in front.

The mannequins first appeared on the stage, then walked down the steps to the ballroom and circled the floor, giving the spectators full opportunity of viewing the styles. They were all applauded, many lovely suits and smart bathing togs being seen.

Mr. F. J. Crowhurst, the president, headed the committee in charge of the dance arrangements and assisting him were Messrs. Thomas H. Allen, Victor Robley, Peter Gorst, F. R. Bickford and members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of which Mrs. D. W. Burnett acted as convener of the ladies' committee.

Mrs. T. A. Johnston was responsible for the fashion show arrangements and for the efficient way in which that part of the function was conducted.

HURRAH! TODAY 79 YEARS YOUNG!

"WELL, what of it—lots of men reach that age?" Oh, yes? And they "never had a sick day", they will tell you, but when I was fifty Sir William Osler told me I could not live four months, and all those fifty years I'd been physically an underling, and from 32 on a "down-and-out", always in the throes of pain, and disease. Then I took hold of what was left of myself and for 29 years I have climbed steadily until, as I write on my 79th birthday, I fully believe I stand on the very pinnacle of abounding health. And oh! the happiness of this exalted state of body and mind!

You must be in A1 condition to stand this.

"Believe it or not," life is, for me, one continuous jubilation. I run and walk, write books, travel and lecture, work and laugh. The days aren't long enough to suit me. "Believe it or not," I don't care a "whoop", but in all sincerity I assert I can help any and every reader whose organs are not already so degenerated or diseased as to be practically beyond repair, to the same state of exultant, ecstatic health and the successful life that must result therefrom.

Again "I don't care a whoop" how you decide, but I solemnly declare that, while my foods are not the sole means which I have made use of, a free use of Roman Meal, Bekus-Puddy, Lishus and Kofy-Sub have played a greater part in my regeneration and rejuvenation than all other means combined.

Hundreds of thousands have been similarly blest. Anyone who cares can prove that anything I say in words can only faintly portray the health benefits derivable from a free daily use of Roman Meal, Bekus-Puddy, Lishus and Kofy-Sub, for say, two weeks. Take one or two full meals a day for a few consecutive days, note the full, free eliminations of the intestinal waste (if simultaneously you take no laxatives or enemas) and the resulting sense of daily increasing animation and well-being. You will then need no further proof of my claims. You will know this is your cheapest, most certain road to bubbling, jubilant, ecstatic health. Most people fear disease. I defy it at 79. Write for my free bulletins on food and health. Address Robt. G. Jackson, M.D., 576 Vine Ave., Toronto, Ont.

Women Leading In World-Wide Peace Campaign

Enfranchisement of Women and Advancement of International Amity Sentiment Develop Simultaneously, Mrs. H. P. Hodges Shows in Address to Current Events Club at Y.W.C.A.

THE close relationship existing between women's political emancipation and the growth of world sentiment in favor of peace was one of the important points brought out by Mrs. H. P. Hodges in her challenging and thought-provoking address on "The Women's Peace Movement," given to the Y.W.C.A. Current Events Club yesterday afternoon.

But while women were, in sentiment, in favor of peace; while women's organizations, both local, national, and international, were more solidly united and vocal in their sentiment for peace, they had not got down to the practical working out of their ideals as they should. They had not, for instance, got down to the house-to-house canvass to line up the rank and file behind the leaders, as they did in the woman suffrage movement. Yet women's opinion, fortified by the franchise, could carry even greater weight today.

"Even today Governments feel the potential force of the great mass of women who, while they may not understand all the intricacies of world problems, yet are profoundly and instinctively opposed to war. Let us rededicate ourselves to the making of a new world, use that mightiest of weapons, the ballot, in bringing home to Governments and statesmen in charge of foreign policies our sincere conviction that the day of economic separatism between nations is doomed, that social and economic mal-adjustments which sooner or later affect political relations are dangerous, and that the whole fabric of civilization rests upon the slender threads of world harmony. Let us arm ourselves with all the forces at our command to fight that hydra-headed monster, the god of war," said Mrs. Hodges in her summary.

ABLE SURVEY

The women's peace movement practically dated from the Great War. Before 1918 women had votes in four countries only; today they had equal citizenship rights in twenty-seven countries. This simultaneous development in the feminist cause and in the movement towards world organization and peace was taken as symptomatic. Fundamentally they were two phases of the same general impulse, the struggle for democracy being another phase—through which history had sought to establish the value of the individual and to substitute reason for force in the management of human affairs. The convergence of the two movements had served to quicken the development of each. International affairs would not be playing the part they were today in national politics and national interest if women had continued without political power. On the other hand, international affairs had opened up a new field for public participation by women; through enfranchisement, to make their influence felt.

The women's peace movement had its inception, in the broader sense, in 1870, when Julia Ward Howe, roused by the tragedy of the Franco-Prussian war and the American Civil War, made an international appeal to mothers to interfere and prevent the waste of human life, to unite their forces around the world in a peace crusade. In 1872, while a delegate to the Prison Reform Congress in London, she founded the Women's Peace Association. But women had not then acquired citizenship, and their views carried little weight.

INTERNATIONAL GROUP

It was not until 1888 that the first large international group was formed under the name of "International Council of Women," the outgrowth of an idea of Mrs. May Wright Sewell, an ardent peace worker. Even then this council had a special peace department. It had since grown enormously, organized in forty-one countries, with a total membership of about 40,000,000. Although it covered a wide range of interests, one of the principal aims was international understanding. In this connection Mrs. Hodges noted that the Dowager Marchioness of Aberdeen and Temair, president of the council since 1893, was this year nominated as a candidate for the Nobel Peace Prize, an index of the importance attached to the council's work in the interests of peace.

Other nationally and internationally organized women's societies that had given the movement impetus before the war were the W.C.T.U., organized in 1883; the Young Women's Christian Association; the International Suffrage Alliance, organized in Britain in 1904, and now, under the name of the International Alliance of Women for Suffrage and Equal Citizenship, organized in forty-three countries, under the world leadership of Mrs. Corbett Ashby.

The growing desire or international concord was stimulated by the tragic death of Nurse Edith Cavell, whose much-quoted words, "Patriotism is not enough," were recalled by Mrs. Hodges. These were "a stirring challenge to all those who feel that the real brotherhood of man transcends national boundaries."

FIRST UNITED MOVE

The first definite move for concerted demonstration of women's desire for peace did not come until 1915, when Jane Addams and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt called a convention, out of which grew the women's peace party. Under the banners of this organization, at the call of the women of England, Germany, Belgium, and Holland, women from twelve countries gathered at The Hague to discuss ways and means of bringing to an end a war which was responsible for the starving of children, the killing of the flower of their manhood, and the ruination of their countries. Jane Addams presided at this meeting.

Although this was in 1915, it was notable that this convention recommended things which actually foreshadowed the fourteen points later proposed by President Wilson as the basis of the Allies' Peace Conference: Settlement of international disputes by arbitration, a permanent international court of justice, setting up of a permanent international conference in which women should take a part, the voiding of secret international treaties, and other points.

RAPID DEVELOPMENT

After the war, peace sentiment had developed apace. In 1921, was formed in Washington the World's Disarmament Committee; in 1925, the National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War; in 1926, in Great Britain, sponsored by the Committee for the Peace and the League of Nations, the International Alliance of Women for Suffrage and Equal Citizenship, under the presidency of Mrs. Corbett Ashby and the leadership of Lady Astor, and which held its first study conference in Amsterdam in 1927, and in 1928, the first Pan-Pacific Conference of Women.

In 1929, a rally of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom was held in Germany, its primary object being to bring before the public, ten years after the Great War, the terrifying advance in chemical destruction. In 1930, Frau Perlen, a German member of this body, conceived the idea of an international declaration in support of world disarmament, and in September, 1931, an outgrowth of this, the international organizations of women had met at Geneva and pledged themselves to assist the coming conference for the reduction and limitation of armaments. The peace and disarmament committee of the Women's International League was created, and through this medium fifteen societies, speaking in Geneva for about 50,000,000 women of fifty-six countries, sought to enlist the support of women in all parts of the world in the service of peace.

In this connection, Mrs. Hodges recalled that a member of the World's Y.W.C.A., Miss Mary Dingman, who made a visit of several days to Victoria two years ago, was appointed president of this great forum, and at Geneva had been the leader on the occasion of the spectacular presentation of the disarmament petitions with 8,000,000 signatures. Reference was also made to the emergency peace campaign in which Dr. Maude Royden, of London, is now engaged.

Mrs. W. G. Wilson presided, and an animated discussion followed the address.

Camera Club Of Y.M.C.A. Holds Dance

The annual get-together dance of the Y.M.C.A. Camera Club, held last night in the K. of C. Hall, was a most jolly affair, and a large gathering of members and their friends attended.

Dancing was enjoyed from 9 o'clock until 1 a.m. to the music of a popular four-piece orchestra. During the evening three popular numbers, written by local musicians, were played and included "Sunshine," by Mr. Harvey Dodson, president of the club; "Blue for You," by Mr. Jack Carter, and "Swinging the Cat," by Harry Symonds. Medleys were great favorites and assisted in making the dance an informal one. Mr. Dodson acted as master of ceremonies.

A buffet supper was served, and on display in other rooms were works of the members, and several cameras which had been used in producing some of the pictures exhibited.

The committee in charge of the arrangements was composed of Mr. William Mullens, the chairman; Mr. John Bone and Mr. Abner Garland.

OLD-TIME DANCE TONIGHT

There will be an old-time dance, under the auspices of the Victoria Liberal Association social committee, at the Foresters' Hall tonight. D. Galey will be master of ceremonies. Dancing will be from 9 o'clock to midnight.

COLLEGE PLAY IS APPLAUDED

"Laburnum Grove," Priestley's "Immoral Comedy," Given at High School

Although characterized on the programme as "An Immoral Comedy in Three Acts," J. B. Priestley's "Laburnum Grove" made an excellent vehicle for the Victoria College Players' Club for its annual presentation at the High School Auditorium last evening. Those who are still puzzled about the appropriateness of the adjective "immoral" will have an opportunity to explore the matter further at the second showing of the comedy at the same hour and place this evening. It had a very cordial reception last night.

The play is admirably cast, particularly in respect of the men's roles. It is also excellently staged.

"Laburnum Grove" is (again the programme is the informant) next Shooter's Green, a suburb of North London. The whole action of the play takes places in the living-room of the Radfern's house in this street. It is one of those not unusual households, with an apparently home-loving and unexciting pater familias, George Radfern, who year in, year out, dons his slippers after supper and spends the evening reading a detective story, while his cheerful, unworldly, old-fashioned wife occupies herself with small household tasks. In addition to their rather bored but pretty daughter, Elsie, who is rather impatient with the monotonous placidity of her parents, the household, at the time when the play begins, also includes two quarrelsome "in-laws," Mr. and Mrs. Baxley, who, coming for a visit, have extended their unwelcome stay indefinitely.

OTHER ROLES

These people in themselves offer delightful scope for comedy characterization, Mr. Priestley having provided them with amusing dialogue which brings out the marked contrasts of personality. There are more additions as the play progresses: Harold Russ, Elsie's sweetheart; Joe Fletten, a ragged and brow-beaten individual, whose real identity is hardly ever made quite clear, and the two representatives of the law, Inspector Stack and Sergeant Morris.

From act to act "the plot thickens," as the serial-story synopsis says. The trouble begins, and with it the mystification of the audience as well as of the majority of the characters in the play, when George Redfern, from motives never made quite clear, tells the family (minus Mrs. Redfern) at supper-time that he is a crook and not the respectable businessman they have all along supposed him to be.

The reactions are entertaining. But one needs to see the play to appreciate how thoroughly inside their respective roles the majority of the young people are.

GOOD WORK

George Redfern is played by David Boyd with such a nice admixture of innocence and cunning, of old-fashioned fatherliness and modern guilt, that one never feels quite certain what his true character is—not even at the final drop of the curtain when his wife and daughter are excitedly preparing to go with him for one of the first long holidays abroad the family have ever enjoyed together.

Mrs. Redfern, played by Joyce Harvey, gentle-seeming in the earlier part of the play, develops quite an assertion of spirit, and proves capable of remorselessly stinging remarks, as when she "told off" her brother-in-law at the close of the first scene in Act Two. Her delightful innocence and unworldliness returns in the interview with the Scotland Yard detective. This is good character work.

OTHER PARTS

Of the other roles, Baxley, played by George Kidd, deserves special mention. This had well-nigh professional strength of delineation, showed strong comedy sense, a feeling for the stage, a free and natural deportment, and a splendid speaking voice that projected itself easily to the remotest part of the auditorium. His wife, Lucy, played by Luella Ketcheson, had a consistently rancid temper, and Miss Ketcheson made the lines smart. Kathleen Coates played the part of the daughter, Elsie, a little too jerkily at times, but with intelligence; and Robert Tait took the role of her sweetheart, Harold Russ, with a neat shiftiness of affection.

In the parts of Inspector Stack and Sergeant Morris, Lee Leighton and Ronald Jeune were excellent, the former having an important scene in the second act. Thomas Mayne was effective as the mystifying Joe Fletten.

Peerless Fashion Patterns

Shirt collar, perky sleeves, tricky pockets and flaring hem are the mode for tiny tots as well as for her big sister.

What could be more apic and span or more appropriate for romping youngsters than this easy to don flared dress with French pantees to complete it? Such a practical outfit as well as cute looking. The pantees are the cut up at the sides type, so neat and comfortable.

The one-piece dress and the one-piece pantee open out flat for easy ironing.

The sewing chart included in the pattern explains in pictures every step in the making.

It will help you decide to sew several outfits of crisp cottons. Percale prints, bright chintz and broadcloth in stripped or flowered pattern wash and wear especially well and cost so little.

Style No. 3189 is designed for sizes 2, 4 and 6 years. Size 4 requires two and one-quarter yards of 36-inch material with three-eighths of a yard of 36-inch contrasting for dress and pantee.

Flowers Arranged High Suit Hall or Corner

Arrangement of Flowers Suitable for Console Table in Hall, Ginger Rogers Posing.

By MRS BERT S McDONALD
Central Press Flower Stylist

IF your household budget will not permit you to buy flowers for your home all the time, maybe it will let you buy them once a week, or twice a month, or at least for special occasions when guests are expected.

Ginger Rogers displays quite an elaborate arrangement suitable for the console table in a hall. While the form of the container is practically the same as might be used on a coffee table, yet the arrangement attains height by the use of long cattails. This arrangement would, of course, not be appropriate as a centrepiece on a dining or coffee table because of its height; however, as a decoration for a hallway or corner table it is quite striking, and its gold and orange shades are sure to add a pleasing highlight to a room.

Jesus Christ To Be Theme For the Day

"Christ Jesus" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist on Sunday. The golden text is: "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, today and for ever" (Hebrews xiii, 8).

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives; and recovery of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised" (Luke iv, 18).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Divine Truth, Life, and Love gave Jesus authority over sin, sickness, and death. His mission was to reveal the Science of celestial being, to prove what God is and what He does for man."

PROF. JOHNSON ON 'TWINS FROM EDEN'

"The Twins From Eden" will be the subject for study by Prof. G. E. Johnson at the Oak Bay Hall on Sunday night. Were there "Twins in Eden?" at the time of the beginning of the race? If so, were they twin persons or twin institutions, and what is the relation of these Edenic institutions to our own modern spiritual requirements? These will be the questions to be answered in this study, and as usual the answers will be taken from the "Word of God."

RECALL TO RELIGION WILL BE DISCUSSED

On Tuesday at the weekly meeting of the Victoria and District British-Israel Association in the Foresters' Hall, the speaker will be Mrs. E. W. Abraham, and her subject, "The Archbishop of Canterbury's Recall to Religion."

Mrs. Abraham will point out some angles of the recent national crisis which have hitherto been overlooked, and will show that the "Recall to Religion" is a challenge to every thinking person in that probably the whole future of our nation depends upon its answer to this call.

REEVE CROUCH WILL SPEAK ON SUNDAY AT ST. AIDAN'S CHURCH

Tomorrow will be "Neighborhood Sunday" at St. Aidan's United Church. St. Aidan's serves the communities of Mount Tolmie, Braefoot and Gordon Head and affords fellowship to those who dwell in these districts. A special invitation is given to all residents to attend the special services tomorrow at St. Aidan's Church.

In the morning the pastor, Rev. T. G. Griffiths will preach on "The Swelling of Jordan." At the evening service Reeve Crouch, of Saanich, and Douglas Gilbert will give short addresses of witness on the church and the community. There will be special music by the choir.

What Today Means

"PISCES"

If February 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m., from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. and from 10:30 p.m. until midnight.

You cannot depend too much on other people attending to things for you this day. Forgetfulness will be more or less prevalent. This is a good day to give people with whom you have an engagement an early reminder of it, if it is possible. In seeking advice, be sure that the party you consult is disinterested and has no axe of his own to grind, for selfishness is apt to play an important part in this day's events. You may discover that individual taste and opinions vary greatly, so do not depend too much on someone else's judgment in your selection of some form of diversion. For conversational purposes many people today will draw upon their imagination, so it might be well to take a grain of salt. Married and engaged couples, and those marking time before announcing their engagement, must be prepared to take good naturedly much joking at their own expense.

If a woman and February 27 is your birthday, you may be inclined to be very diffident, due possibly to your not having sufficient self-possession. You are also likely to be extremely impressionable, with the result that your mind may dwell too much on trivial, unpleasant happenings. Cultivate the habit of knowing you are capable, intelligent and as entertaining as anyone else. Let disagreeable things roll out of your mind like water does off a duck's back. You have it in your power to do this with a little effort and if you do your happiness will increase a hundred fold. You have a marvelous personality, that must not be allowed to be hidden by a mask of excessive modesty. As a secretary, librarian, artist, author, public stenographer or teacher you may have the opportunity of having your real worth gratifyingly recognized. It seems logical that you should marry and be very happy.

The child born on February 27 is likely upon graduating, to surprise both family and friends by some unusual accomplishment. This youngster may plod along for some time before revealing it has some very remarkable talent, or a rare ability to do some very worth-while thing.

If a man and February 27 is your natal day, you may be too easy-going, for your own good. You have a vast amount of ability, if you will but use it wisely. Exert yourself sufficiently, and you can make a wonderful success of your life. As an inventor, chemist, agriculturalist, engineer, writer, painter, electrician or salesman there is no limit to what you can accomplish.

TALK ON MINISTER'S LIFE WILL BE GIVEN BY FAIRFIELD PASTOR

Bringing to his subject a wealth of experience gathered during thirty-three years in the ministry, Rev. J. Richmond Craig will give a lecture on "The Lights and Shades of a Minister's Life" in the Fairfield United Church on Wednesday, March 10 at 8 p.m.

Preceding the lecture, a banquet will be held at 6:30 o'clock in honor of the pastor's thirty-third anniversary in the ministry.

The artists for the occasion will be Miss Adeline Bangster, contralto; Gilbert Margison, violinist and Robert Husband, tenor. Miss Isabelle Pike, A.T.C.M., will be the accompanist.

The lecture and banquet is being sponsored by the Women's Association and the board of stewards.

Rosemont Slight Favorite to Win From Fine Field

Foxcatcher Farm's Entry Will Face Starter at Santa Anita at Odds of 2 to 1—Chanceview Is Second Choice and Taylor Entry Next—Fast Track Forecast—50,000 Crowd Is Expected

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 26 (P).—Out of a welter of pent-up excitement, twenty-eight horses, four of them Canadian-owned, were named today to start in the third runnin' of the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap.

The following contenders were listed:

Indian Broom and Special Agent, owned by Major Austin C. Taylor, of Vancouver; Rushaway, owned by A. G. Tarn, of Winnipeg, and Sablin, owned by the late E. F. Seagram, of Waterloo, Ont., together with such United States favorites as Rosemont, Red Rain, Time Supply, Star Shadow, Mr. Bones, Seabiscuit, Accolade, Chanceview, Boxthorn, Gold Seeker, Goldeneye, Grand Manitou, Water Splash and Don Roberto.

The list includes leading handicap talent in North America, slated to run the one and one-quarter-mile for the richest turf offering in the world.

FOUR CANADIAN RIDERS

Aside from the interest in the Canadian-owned horses, Dominion attention turned, too, to the jockeys. Four of them are from north of the international border.

Georgie Woolf, crack rider from Cardston, Alta., who won the rich stake in 1935 with Azucar, gets the mount on A. A. Baroni's Star Shadow at 110 pounds. Johnny Longden, of Calgary, goes up on Rushaway at 113 pounds, and A. Robertson, the 122-pound Toronto jockey, rides F. A Carreaud's Time Supply. Sterling Young, of Toronto, at 109 pounds, has the mount on the Seagram entry.

Upwards of 50,000 fans are expected to witness the race, and the betting figure on the eight events of Handicap Day is expected to soar far over the $1,000,000 mark.

ROSEMONT FAVORED

Rosemont, the Foxcatcher Farm's future book favorite, remained a choice to win, and, coupled with his capable running mate, Gold Seeker, offered the shortest probable odds—$2 for $1.

Clear weather and a good track were forecast, enhancing the chances of Foxcatcher candidates, but Seabiscuit, pride of the C. S. Howard stable; C. V. Whitney's Red Rain; Star Shadow, Time Supply, Special Agent and Indian Broom also like a good strip.

Star Shadow was in at 110 and Red Rain at 116.

A. G. Vanderbilt's Chanceview, attractively weighted at 109, was a decided threat when sloppy going appeared in prospect, and Time Supply, which ran second last year and third the year before, could not be ignored in off-going or otherwise.

Vancouver Hoop Tussle to Be On The Air Tonight

OPENING battle of the three-out-of-five-game series for the Mainland senior basketball championship between Vancouver Province and University of British Columbia this evening at the V.A.C. gymnasium will be broadcast over CKMO, according to word received from Vancouver yesterday. The broadcast will commence at 9 o'clock, and Jack Short, former Victorian, who has been gaining quite a reputation in the radio world for his colorful sports announcing, will be at the microphone. Victorians will be more than interested in this broadcast, as the winners of this series will clash with the Dominoes in the British Columbia final, which opens in Vancouver on Friday, March 19. The second game is set for the following night, and then the teams return to this city to renew the warfare.

CARDINALS IN CAGE VICTORY

Andrews Scores Winning Basket Seconds Before Time at High Gym

With George "Porky" Andrews intercepting a pass and racing down the floor to score the winning basket about twenty seconds from time, the Cardinals continued their triumphant march in Victoria High School basketball circles yesterday by nosing out the Nuggets, 20-19. It was a great game, one which saw the lead swing from one side to the other during the forty minutes.

Victoria High Shamrocks gained a close decision in the second game played at the High gymnasium by beating Victoria College Golds, 22-21.

Mid-Winter Golf Meet at Oak Bay

Due to the fact that the Colwood course was once more declared unfit for play, after careful examination by tournament officials, the ninth annual Empress Mid-Winter golf meet was yesterday switched to the Oak Bay links. This marks the third successive year that the Mid-Winter tournament has taken place at the Victoria Golf Club. The tournament will get under way Monday morning, with a field well over the century mark teeing off in the qualifying rounds for both men and women. Secretary J. V. Perks, of the Oak Bay Club, stated yesterday that the entry list will close this afternoon at 4 o'clock, and then the draw will be made and released for publication. Oak Bay course was reported in excellent condition, as the fairways and greens have been carefully groomed during the past week. The above picture was taken from the seventh tee, and it gives a person the fine scenic view of the Straits and the snow-capped Olympic Mountains.

Canadians Blank Englishmen, 3-0; Clinch Honors

Kimberley Dynamiters Skate to Sensational Victory Over England in World's Amateur Hockey Series—Only Smashing Upset Can Deprive Canada of the Championship Today

LONDON, Feb. 26 (P).—Canada virtually clinched the world's amateur hockey championship tonight by defeating England 3-0 in the most important game of the tournament. Eleven thousand crowded into the Wembley Stadium for the match.

Switzerland defeated Germany 6-0 in the second game tonight. The series ends tomorrow when Canada meets Switzerland and England plays Germany. Canada, with victories over Germany and England in the final round, needs but a tie or better tomorrow to capture the title and nothing but a smashing upset now can stop the Dynamiters from Kimberley.

Kimberley, representing Canada, and the Canadian-trained players wearing England's blue and white, did not provide the high class hockey expected but the game was thrilling throughout.

George "Red" Goble gave the Dynamiters the jump in the first period by scoring the first goal on Jimmy Foster, the Moncton and English Olympic goalie, in eight games of the current tournament.

FINE DEFENCE WORK

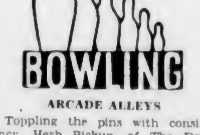

From then on the Canadian gave England a lesson in defensive hockey. Ralph Redding scored in the second period on a pass from Goble. Redding got his second goal in the last period.

Tempers got the better of the players twice. In the first period Gordon Dailley, Winnipeg-born English player, traded punches with Goble. Again in the third period Bill Burnett, Kimberley defence man, fought with Edgar Brenchley, Niagara Falls contribution to English hockey. Both were ordered from the ice.

Their banishment was the signal for a fifteen-minute demonstration by the crowd that littered the ice with newspapers, orange peel, tin cans and any other missles within reach. Order was finally restored when the band played the national anthem.

Burnett and Paul Kozack stood out on the Canadians' defence, while Dailley was England's star.

Kenny Campbell's shutout brought his total to six in the eight games Canada has won without a loss or tie. He was scored on twice by Poland in the first round when Canada won 8-2. France scored a goal on him in the second round.

ARCADE ALLEYS

Toppling the pins with consistency, Herb Pickup, of The Daily Colonist squad, set a new season's record in the Senior Tenpin League last night at the Arcade Alleys by finishing the evening with a three-game total of 648. He broke the previous mark by ten pins. Pickup shuffled the maples for 222 in his first game, came through with a 225 score in the second and finished up with 201. The Colonist team won two games from the Poodle Dog Cafe and went six fixtures in front of the cafemen in the race for the honors.

Scores follow:

CHAMPIONS DEFEATED IN WOMEN'S DOUBLES BY UP-ISLAND PAIR

Daphne and Mary Fernie Dethroned by Kay Staples and Ulrica Norie—Mrs. Hughes and Joe Zaharko Lose to Mrs. Heywood and Bleasdale—Finals Are Scheduled for Today

Women's badminton champions of Vancouver Island for the past season, the Fernie sisters, Daphne and Mary, from British Columbia's Interior city, Kamloops, were minus their mythical crowns today.

Playing in the quarter-finals of the annual Vancouver Island championships last night at the Bay Street Armories, the defending titleholders fell before the finer stroking of Ulrica Norie and Kay Staples, young Duncan combination, in one of the major upsets recorded during an afternoon and evening of really smart shuttle play. The scores were 9-15, 15-11, 15-6.

The second upset came later in the evening, when Mrs. Hughes, Winnipeg, Manitoba singles champion, and Joe Zaharko, Toronto, ranking Canadian netter, and seeded No. 2 in the mixed doubles draw, passed out of the tournament at the hands of Mrs. Heywood and Des Bleasdale, Victoria combination, after a three-set battle. The local pair played the better badminton and were deserving of victory. The Easterners gained their triumph in the second set after the Victorians had taken the initial match. The scores were 15-4, 8-15, 15-12.

BRENTWOOD PAIR WIN

Coupled with the two startling upsets was the smart victory of Muriel and Phyllis Sluggett, promising young Brentwood duo, over Mrs. Del Barkhuff and Miss Zoe Smith, Seattle pair, in the quarter-finals of the women's doubles. The winners played steady badminton, displayed some remarkable shots and court generalship.

George Lane, city champion and Victoria's chief standard-bearer, gained the semi-finals of the men's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles.

Favorites advanced in order in the other matches, but only after plenty of stiff opposition.

The tourney, easily one of the best ever staged by the Victoria Garrison Badminton Club, will be brought to a close today. Semi-finals will be played in the afternoon commencing at 2 o'clock and the finals in the evening with the first matches scheduled for 7:30 o'clock.

Hon. Eric W. Hamber, Lieutenant-Governor, will present the many handsome trophies at the conclusion of play and the tournament will be officially closed with ha monster dance at the Armories.

AUSTRALIANS SCORE 530 RUNS FOR FIVE WICKETS

Bradman Dismissed By Kenneth Farnes After Great Stand

Home Captain Survives Only a Few Minutes of Today's Play and Is Bowled After Making 169—Australians Pile Up Fine Score At Tea Time and Will Carry On

MELBOURNE, Australia, Feb. 27 (AP).—Australia had scored 530 runs for the loss of five wickets at tea time today in the fifth and deciding test cricket match with England. The Australians will carry on after the interval in an effort to build up an even larger first-innings score.

Don Bradman, Australian captain, who scored 165 yesterday, survived only a few minutes in today's play. After four runs he was bowled by Kenneth Farnes, the Essex amateur fast bowler.

C. L. Badcock, of South Australia, then was joined by R. Gregory, the brilliant young Victorian. At the lunch interval, Badcock had batted 40 and his colleague 25.

BRILLIANT BATTING

MELBOURNE, Australia, Feb 26 (AP).—Sparkling centuries by Don Bradman and Stanley McCabe gave Australia an excellent start in the fifth and deciding test match against England today. When play closed the Antipodean total had been carried to 342 for three wickets, the Aussie skipper compiling 165 not out and McCabe, 112.

A crowd of 32,342 sent up a cheer when Bradman won the toss and sent the Australians in to bat. With a perfect wicket to play on the home team had a real advantage and made the best of it. Victory will give Bradman and his colleagues the rubber and the mythical "ashes" emblematic of world cricket supremacy. The teams are tied with two wins each.

Bradman gave a faultless display and equalled the record of twelve centuries made by Jack Hobbs, famous Surrey batsman, in Anglo-Australian tests. When play closed the young skipper had been at the wicketa for two hours, 30 minutes, hitting seventeen fours.

McCabe, Australian vice-captain, played vigorously for nearly three hours. After hitting sixteen boundaries he finally attempted a big hit off Hedley Verity and was caught by Kenneth Farnes at mid-off, being third man out at 303.

STAYS WITH BRADMAN

C. L. Badcock, South Australia, stayed with Bradman until the close of play, scoring 12 runs. J. H. Fingleton, New South Wales and K. Rigg, Victoria, opened the innings for the Australians, W. A. Brown, veteran Queensland first-wicket batsman, being dropped from the team. Rigg left at 42 after scoring 28 runs and Fingleton was dismissed a few minutes after lunch with the total at 54.

Play was unenterprising before lunch, Fingleton and Rigg putting up a stolid defence. The former was in difficulties at the start, surviving an appeal for leg-before-wicket by Farnes and being dropped by Allen, English skipper in the same over. Rigg was the more courageous but after making 28 flicked a ball from Farnes into the hands of Leslie Ames behind the wicket. Bradman followed Rigg and with Fingleton carried the score to 54 at lunch.

On the resumption the second ball sent down by Farnes saw Fingleton give a gift catch to W. Voce at second slip. The New South Wales player had an uncomfortable innings and never appeared safe when opposing fast bowlers.

The Bradman-McCabe partnership continued until the tea interval but Allen dropped a hard chance by McCabe when he had made 11. After that the pair settled down to play confidently. The double-century went up in a shade more than three hours and the 300 mark was reached an hour later.

Play proceeded in warm, sunny weather, the gate realizing more than $20,000.

RUGBY NOTES

By OBSERVER

It is a rare thing for anyone who has played, or a follower of English Rugby, to lose interest in a lifetime. I am now thinking of Hastie Cochrane, whose remarks so kindly made last week are noted and appreciated, particularly so when he was a player some fifty or more years ago.

Yes, Marshall Reid was very good at drop kicking, but the year 1887 was a memorable one for Scotland, the Scottish fifteen was so good that they actually defeated Wales by the large score of four goals, eight tries, or forty-four points to none. Marshall Reid was not playing international Rugby that year for Scotland. The players chosen to play in that memorable game from the West of Scotland were C. H. Orr and D. S. Morton. Marshall Reid played for Scotland in the season of 1883 against England only. It would be proper to think that Mr. Cochrane and other old Rugby players and followers of international English Rugby can remember this bright play of the Scotsmen in 1887. I know this will not be particularly good reading for any Welshmen who happened to be at Edinburgh that disastrous season.

WALES DEFEATED

There are probably some who might think it quite unnecessary—Welshmen—to bring back such unseasonable information. I am doing this for a very practical purpose. Those among us who might think it impudent on our part to tackle those great international fifteens in Great Britain and other parts of the British Empire will take notice of the following: In the year 1880 when England and Wales met for the first time under English Rugby Union rules, Wales was defeated by the huge score of eight goals and six tries, a total of fifty eight points to none. I mention this to show even the crack fifteens representing their respective countries today have had to "have a christening in international games." Canada, I believe, will not have such a huge score as the one I have above mentioned scored against.

One can imagine most Canadian players saying to themselves they can do better than that. Rightly so, when the New Zealanders were here a year ago it gave us a reasonable view of what a picked Canadian fifteen could possibly do in an international game. Victoria's fifteen were not by any means disgraced; had the backfield been equal to the Victoria forwards that afternoon the score would have been much smaller.

The improvement in play on the Mainland since the New Zealanders' visit would make it difficult for the best teams to pile up a large score at all. However, Canada with those huge scores to look at—we have given you in this column—can look much more favorably to the possibilities of her players lucky enough to make the trip to either Great Britain or New Zealand.

I have it on good authority that inquiries are being made as to what arrangements can be made between New Zealand and Canada. This does not mean that the tour to Britain is not going forward. When arrangements are made for international tours they have to be made years ahead. You cannot just arrange overnight. It takes a lot of time and thinking. Then, too, all the time the officials have to keep an eye on all probable and possible players, seniors and intermediates, also school players, to make sure they are not selecting any mere flashes, but steady resourceful players, who can be depended to uphold the prestige of the Dominion of Canada.

GREAT CARE

All the above arrangements require great care, because when you are on tour you cannot pick up anyone on the sidelines the same as is possible to do at home. A representative team has to go and battle through the Rugby season with the players chosen before starting on tour. You will readily see how careful the selection committee have to be in making their selection. Social standing cuts no figure in an international fifteen, only the best players available are ever used.

Casual remarks made by some are often useful material for an observer. Not far from where I happened to be seated the other day, I heard some fellows discussing Gilbert's great goal-kicking ability. One chap said it was very exceptional, but while perhaps not common, the South Africans' fullback, Brand, had had almost an equal record. Brand played in Great Britain for the South Africans on their last tour and kicked thirty-one goals. The South Africans played twenty-six games; won twenty-three, lost one, drawn two; total points, 407 to 125 against. Osler, the captain of the team, also kicked sixteen goals. This very fine team played thirty players, kicked a total of sixty-one goals. Only forty-three tries were unconverted. This is further definite proof that goal-kicking will make a difference between games won and lost during an English Rugby season.

LOST ONE GAME

Humorously, the only game the South Africans lost on their last tour to Great Britain was lost by meeting a fifteen able—on the day's play—to kick goals better than themselves. The East Midlands and Leicestershire County fifteen actually kicked six goals, one dropped, one penalty, thirty points, to the South Africans' two goals, one dropped, four tries, twenty-one points. Will anyone doubt the value of goal-kicking in English Rugby after such practical demonstrations as we have given you in this column from time to time? I believe not.

If some of our own players do more practising at goal-kicking instead of so much wild and foolish up-field kicking—with no useful purpose served—it will improve their chances to better their game and so increase the efficiency of the fifteens they represent.

When the Fifth Regiment's senior players carried all before them until meeting the Navy throughout one or two seasons—it is difficult to believe that not a player on either side dropped a goal, at least during one season. It seems almost incredible, but nevertheless quite true.

Next week I intend to give you real reasons why the backfield play in Victoria is far too slow to develop very fast three-quarters and halves. Some of our players are taught what are considered smart tricks but in reality are really duds.

We want to see all fullbacks develop great goal-kicking powers. All centre three-quarters, stand-off and scrum halves should develop drop-kicking powers, for the very simple reason they nearly always are in the most favorable part of the field of play to be able to do so. No players are first-class unless able to do the unexpected in the art of kicking. Drop half that nonsense of kicking ahead, unless you have a real objective and an understanding with a teammate before you kick. It is a waste of time and energy mostly. Get your points the proper way, by goal-kicking conversions, penalty, drop and even goal-kicking from a mark occasionally.

SATURDAY'S GAMES

Don't make any excuses if you are beaten on Saturday because of not being in condition. There is absolutely no reason for not being fit. I understand the Scottish and College have been hard training. Possibly the other teams have also been training hard. We are going to await the whistle before mentioning anything about the various fifteens so that we shall see what a long lay-off can do to the various players.

Mr. Cochrane has mentioned something about a seven-a-side Rugby tournament. I believe this is being seriously considered. It was mentioned by the Dominion president some time ago. Yes, it is good training, and the weights make very little difference. It is a question of speed and smart plays.

RIGHT, ANYHOW

Friend (at a French play): "Why did you applaud so vigorously when that comedian made his speech before the curtain?"

Spriggins (confidently): "So that folk would think I understood French. What did he say?"

Friend: "He said that the remainder of his part would be taken by an understudy."

Security Prices Little Changed At Wall Street

NEW YORK, Feb. 26 (AP).—Selected rail and industrial leaders plodded over the recovery route in today's stock market, but many issues lacked climbing vigor.

It was the slowest full day's session since January 4, transfers totaling 1,775,790 shares compared with 2,227,830 yesterday. The Associated Press average of 60 issues was .2 of a point at 72.1.

A late rally in rails did much to put up prices at the close.

U.S. Steel was up 1 1-4 at 110 7-8, but Bethlehem was off 1 1-8 at 91 5-8. "Big Steel" touched 111 1-2 at the best.

Bad breaks in secondary issues failed to shake the bond market as a whole.

The foreign section was mostly quiet, although Polish 8's lost 7 to 48 and the 7's dropped 9 to 68. U.S. Governments closed 1-32 to 1-4 of a point lower on skimpy volume.

STOCKS EASIER AT MONTREAL

Metals and Constructions Close Lower — Power Issues Irregular

MONTREAL, Feb. 26 (CP).—Most sections of the stock market were lower today, although one or two selected issues pushed ahead. Utilities and metals took most punishment.

At 29, Power Corporation sold off 1 3-4. Quebec Power gained 1-2 but Shawinigan lost 7-8 and Brazilian 3-8.

Noranda dropped a point at 77 with Nickel and Hollinger off 1-4 each at 70 3-4 and 14 3-4, respectively.

Losses of 1-4 each sent Dominion Steel & Coal to 19 3-4; Cement to 18 1-2, and General Steel Wares, 15 3-4. Massey-Harris advanced a point to 11.

TORONTO STOCK PRICES HIGHER

Oils, Liquors and Implement Shares Strong—Canada Packers at New High

TORONTO, Feb. 26 (CP).—Toronto industrial share market advanced with strength showing mainly in oils, liquors and implements. Influence of the Federal budget, announcing tariff changes, was barely perceptible. Textiles and steels on which import duties are lowered, had little part in trade and quotations on listings were mainly firm. Canada Packers was favored because of continuance of the free British market for Canadian hog products and the stock advanced 3 points to 98, a new high price but only 225 shares changed hands.

Steady were National Grocers, Loblaw Stocks, Dominion Stores and Family Farmer and Canadian Bakeries, preferred, added 2. Massey-Harris traded 7,200 shares on a point gain and the preferred advanced 1 3-4 while Waterloo Manufacturing set a new high at 5 but lost all the gain and 1-4 point more in late selling.

Walkers, Distillers-Seagrams and Industrial Alcohol "A" gained 1-2 to 3-4 each and International Petroleum gained 1-2 and Imperial Oil, trading 18,000 shares, added 1-8. C P R. and Brazilian sold down 1-4 to 1-2 and Ford "A" closed unchanged.

THE FAMILY ALBUM—NEAT LIVING ROOM By GLUYAS WILLIAMS

Jane Dixon Says:

A WOMAN WHO HOVERS ON THE VERGE OF TEARS AND IS SO DESPONDENT SHE DOESN'T KNOW WHAT TO DO IS NOT A MAGNET FOR A MAN IN SEARCH OF A FRIEND, COMPANION OR SWEETHEART

The Lonely Hearts are with us again, complaining that life and love are passing them by and asking if I will lend a hand in alleviating their solitude.

Of course I will lend a hand—two hands, a mind and a heart, too—but I must insist on doing it in my own way.

My way is to try to help them to help themselves.

Regardless of what the fakirs and the charlatans claim, no human agency honestly can guarantee to provide you with an adequate mate.

This is a job each of us must do for himself if it is to be done with any degree of safety and intelligence.

There is no excuse for man or woman suffering the dull ache of loneliness in a world so overflowing with people and places and things to do.

Loneliness is not around you. It is within you.

Crowd it out by forcing yourself to new interests, by filling your life with new ambitions and activities.

You'll meet the good companion along a busy road, not on a deserted byway.

Dear Miss Dixon: I was so interested in your column that pertained to loneliness. To be candid, I too am very lonely due to the fact that I am a stranger in this city. Sometimes I'm tempted to cry. I feel so despondent I don't know what I'm doing.

JOINED A LOCAL CHURCH

I'm on my own, had to leave my home in the country to earn my living. I am acquainted with no one here, either my own age or older. Recently I joined a local church and am trying to make friends with some of the members, but alas! all seem to be so much older or younger than I.

I spent Christmas all alone after attending the morning service. The result was I could not relish food eaten in loneliness, so I did without the Christmas feast. I do not feel sorry for myself, but I do know it is not healthy or wise to be alone continuously.

In order to dispel my loneliness, will you please send my address to the gentleman mentioned in your column, or forward his to me so that two lonely hearts can get together. I assure you this is no silly prattling of a flapper—I am twenty-eight years old, starved for companionship, cannot obtain any because of my new environment. I attend night classes in college because, unlike the usual young woman of today, I feel my intellect is alarmingly wanting and needs plenty of cultivation.—M.F.

Answer: I fear, my dear M.F., that it will take considerably more than night classes in college to provide you with an intelligent outlook on life. You will need imagination, initiative, cheerfulness, discounting of self.

At Christmastime you might have gone to one of the charitable organizations in your city and volunteered your services in behalf of those who were being fed by public fund or by contribution of the more fortunate. The Children's Society would have provided you with the name of an underfed or underprivileged little one with whom to share your holiday feast. Your pastor may have known of a needy family in his parish to whom you could have played Santa Claus in person. If the bringing of joy to others can't brighten your day, you are constitutionally dour.

NEW ENVIRONMENT NOT A HAZARD

Certainly a young woman who hovers on the verge of tears and is so despondent she doesn't know what to do is not a magnet for a man in search of a friend, a companion or a sweetheart. As well try to catch flies with vinegar when there's honey to be had.

When you are interested in a variety of things, when you make yourself interesting by what you do, not by what you want, men, and women too, will seek you out and insist on having your company.

A new environment is not a hazard. It is a bright field of opportunity. Your city is rich in legend and in history. Have you explored these mines of a glorious past and a brilliant future? Why not make pilgrimages instead of sitting down glumly and waiting for Prince Charming to turn up and tag you with his lance?

A young woman with gumption enough to earn her own living, who is in daily contact with people in her work, in her school, in her church and in the countless activities that bring human beings together, need not be any lonelier than her spirit allows.

The next time you find yourself sitting and brooding, take yourself by the scruff of the neck and propel yourself into the open. Start walking. And keep your eyes open and your heart receptive. The sunshine trail is never lonely.

CHAPTER XVIII

Heather dared not look at Bruce, but, after the slightest pause, she went on.

"It seems the best way out—for all of us . . . the best thing I can do—for everyone. I hadn't seen it like that until—until this evening, but . . . We haven't any money, and during the past few years things have got hopelessly worse."

She turned her head away.

"I have to think of Bobbie's future—and of Effie's, and now there's Caesar. He will want many things I—we can't afford if he is to keep even fairly well and strong. It isn't as if I were still very young—and there's so little I can do to help, and . . . I'm very tired, Bruce——"

She had not meant to appeal to his tenderness, but words came against her will. "Sometimes I feel that I can't go on much longer; and—you see . . . he's kind—Mr. Mathews, I mean, and it will be like . . . handing over the burden to someone else if—if I——"

She closed her eyes to keep back the tears, and Bruce said harshly, "You don't include Vilette among your responsibilities, or is she one you are willing to hand over to me?" And then, as she was silent, he said with unwilling softening:

"You know I love you, Heather, you must know it. I have tried to tell you a dozen times since I first came here, and you have always made it impossible. Whatever you think or believe, I have never ceased to love you, and when we met again everything was just as it used to be. But you put me off, first with one excuse and then another."

"You talk nonsense about Vilette—you try to pretend that everything is finished between you and me, and you know as well as I do that it's a lie."

"I understand you so well that I can read your thoughts; it's not the last seventeen years that you are holding between us, but it's your accursed family. You consider them all before me and even before yourself—you've made an absurd idol of them which you refuse to see does not really exist except in your imagination."

He broke off, breathing heavily only to go on again ruthlessly. "If you were dead, they would manage without you; none of us are so indispensable that the world would stand still without us. You refused to marry me seventeen years ago for the same reason—I could forgive that, but now, when I beg and implore you, you are willing to sacrifice us both again. You'll marry another man because he can give the family what you think they ought to have, but you'll send me back to the other side of the world as you did before, and convince yourself as you did then that you're doing the right thing."

He passed a shaking hand across his hair in the old gesture she knew so well. "I hope you'll find happiness in this—this absurd passion for self-sacrifice," he went on hoarsely. "In this—this delight in—in ordering the lives of other people—you can't do it—you must leave it to them. If you—if you think you'll ever get any gratitude for—for what you've done you're mistaken . . . I've seen enough of it during the last month, God knows; they—they only make use of you and then defy you. Is there one of them who ever considers your wishes, or who—whoever lifts a hand to do anything for you in return? You—you throw me over and—and treat me as if I were beneath your consideration because Vilette——"

"She loves you."

"Love!" He laughed contemptuously. "She doesn't know what it means. I know as well as you that she always wants the thing that seems beyond her reach. If I were at her feet she'd laugh at me and turn elsewhere. You won't face the truth, Heather—you won't see that—that the ideal you've made of her—of them all—doesn't exist and never did. You'll go on—go on to the end living in a fool's paradise. You'll marry this man, who is nothing the world to you, for the sake of what he can do for Bobbie and Effie and for all of them, and when the inclination moves them, they'll walk out and leave you without a thought or a word of thanks—Heather, for God's sake!"

He tried to touch her, but she shrank away as he went on passionately, "Marry me, and let me take you away. I'm not a rich man like Mathews, but I've got enough to make it possible. It's time that they were made to feel their responsibilities—Heather . . ."

"I can't . . . you don't understand. They're just children to me—even Caesar . . . I should never forgive myself if I . . . He's ill—and there's Effie—and Bobbie—and Vilette . . ."

He broke in harshly, "And Priddy and the house, and the butcher and baker and candlestick maker. I know. And they'll always come first, and so you'll send me to the devil as you did seventeen years ago."

He had moved away from the door at last, but Heather did not stir. She felt as if she were slowly dying, and that nothing mattered.

Bruce stood staring down into the grate, empty save for the ashes from Vilette's cigarettes, which Heather had just tipped into it, and it seemed somehow symbolical of his own life.

He had succeeded in his work, but he had failed in everything else, and the success amounted to nothing in comparison with the failure.

Presently he turned and looked at her. "Well," he said defiantly, "I am waiting for my marching orders."

She met his eyes steadily. "If you are asking me to give up the things that have been my whole life, I can't, Bruce. It would be like running away—deserting."

"Deserting a pack of spoiled, ungrateful children," he said.

"They're all I've had—all I've got," she answered.

"Is that my fault?" he asked.

They looked at each other silently, then Bruce said, "Come here." She obeyed then, standing before him with downbent head, as if she were a child.

"If I throw up my job in Africa, will you marry me? I shan't have any money—only the little I've saved, but we can manage somehow. I've never been afraid of work."

A sob broke from her. "No—I can't."

"Why not?"

With an effort she controlled herself. "I didn't mean to tell you—I feel so ashamed and—and humiliated—even though it's not my fault, but—this morning Caesar said—told me that we're at the end of everything. He hasn't a shilling. I didn't know before—but it seems that for year's we've been living on what capital he had, and now—it's all gone. There isn't a shilling . . . he says we can't even pay Bobbie's school bills any more . . . he says we can't pay any one—so you see . . . I've got to help." She looked up at him and quickly away again. "I didn't mean to tell you—but you're so hard on me . . ." Her voice died away in a whisper.

"And Caesar is willing that you should 'help' him by marrying this man—is that it?"

"He doesn't know . . . I didn't tell him . . . I haven't told any one, and that's why I can't understand how you . . ."

"Vilette told me."

"Vilette!"

"She knows—I don't know how—but it was she who told me."

"I see."

They looked at each other silently. They were but a step apart, but to both of them it seemed as if the width of the world divided them, beneath her chin, raising her face, even when he put a gentle hand.

"You're the only woman I shall ever love, Heather," he said. His voice broke, and he turned sharply away. "But I don't flatter myself that I mean as much to you."

She moved a hand towards him, then let it fall helplessly. "You couldn't keep the whole family, dear," she said tremulously. "Even if . . . if you were the only man I could ever love."

* * *

Life went on very much the same as usual in spite of its many under-currents, the only difference being that Bruce suddenly went back to London, promising to return at the end of the week and to drive the younger members of the party to Weymouth.

With his departure Paddy Jepson appeared again, and Vilette was out with him until all hours of the night.

Caesar was looking very tired and frail, and Heather wondered if she ought to tell him about Henry Mathews. He had called at the house, but she had not seen him, although he had left a basket of hot-house grapes for her.

Paddy Jepson did not put in an appearance the evening Bruce was to return, no doubt by Vilette's instructions, but she had announced carelessly that he would probably come to Weymouth for "week-ends."

She seemed a little more subdued than usual, Heather noticed, but she and Vilette never talked to each other now or exchanged confidences, as they used to do, and Heather had not even troubled to ask her sister how she had discovered about Henry Mathews' proposal. Every one would know soon, and it mattered very little.

It had been arranged that she and Caesar and Priddy were to drive down with Mathews and the chauffeur, and that the others would go with Bruce.

Caesar had furtively produced two new pairs of white flannel trousers which he had rather timidly asked Heather to pack for him, no doubt dreading that she would question him about such an extravagance, but she had said nothing. If it gave him any pleasure she felt it did not matter, and she told herself flippantly that as Henry Mathews would be paying all their bills for the rest of his life, such a small item was of no account.

There was a queer recklessness in her heart—the kind of feeling a rider must experience after taking a difficult hedge and landing on the other side with flying colors.

She was not even afraid of meeting Bruce; everything was so definitely at an end between them. She would not allow herself to remember his last words to her, or the caress of his hand beneath her chin, although sometimes she fancied she could still feel it there.

When she heard his voice in the hall she went to meet him with outstretched hand, but he only said casually, "Hullo, Heather—how are you?" and turned to welcome Effie, who came dancing down the stairs.

To Be Continued.

Strong Export Demand Brings Upturn in Futures at Winnipeg Market

WINNIPEG, Feb. 26 (CP).—Aided by late strength at Chicago, wheat prices climbed to higher levels on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today after mid-session weakness.

Advancing 1 1-2 to 7-8 cents a bushel, wheat finished at $1.24 1-2 for the May future, $1.20 5-8 for July and $1.09 3-4 for October.

Chief strengthening factor was the strong export demand with sales of 750,000 bushels reported. The mid-session weakening factor was reports of moisture in the United States Winter wheat belt.

Liverpool closed 3-8 to 1-2d higher and Buenos Aires was 1 to 1 1-4 cents up at noon. Opening weak, Chicago strengthened and finished with gains of 1-8 and 1 1-4. Purchases of three cargoes of Argentine wheat by Germany and two cargoes of Australian by Italy were reported from Liverpool.

Business in the cash wheat market was dull. The coarse grain trade was moderately active at times.

TAKES APPEAL ON SOLICITING

County Court Will Review Convictions Against Arthur Buller

An appeal has been entered against the decision of Police Magistrate H. C. Hall in the case of Rex vs. Buller. Stuart Henderson, who represented Arthur Buller and other drivers of sight-seeing buses convicted of having violated the city by-law in soliciting passengers on the incoming steamers to patronize the lines represented by the solicitors who used a megaphone operated in a small boat in the harbor, is taking the appeal to the County Court. As counsel for the defence, he took the ground that the city by-law went beyond the rights of the city to enact.

There are three appeals set down at the approaching sitting of the County Court.

TO SET TRIAL DATE

The date for the hearing of the appeal will be set on Monday at 11 o'clock when Judge H. H. Shandley holds court for the purpose of assigning dates for the trials that have been set down for hearing during March.

The other cases to be disposed of during the month are as follows: Robin G. Ledingham vs William W. B. Broadley; Wise & Co. vs. Montague, A. W. and C. S. W. Bridgman; and Henry L. Salmon vs. A. Collins.

That Body of Yours

(By James W. Barton, M.D.)

WHEN A LAXATIVE MUST BE TAKEN CASCARA IS THE LEAST HARMFUL REMEDY

Every physician is asked at times for some simple laxative, something that will gently move the bowels without causing undue weakness. In former days a dose of Epsom salts or castor oil was the favorite laxative (or purgative) used, and when drug manufacturers put some flavoring in Epsom salts and castor oil these preparations retained their popularity. And when the bowels must be emptied quickly and poisons removed from the blood there is nothing more effective than these two common remedies.

However, when the individual cannot be given such strong purgatives regularly, is unable to exercise to stimulate bile flow and bowel action, when something more than a lubricant such as mineral or paraffin oil must be used, or when raw fruits and vegetables cannot be used because they are too irritating to the lining wall of the intestine, then some simple non-habit-forming remedy is appreciated by patient and physician.

Thus, there is one drug, commonly called cascara, the well-dried bark of the trunk and branches of a tree, that is used perhaps more generally than any other drug for mild chronic constipation. Its main advantage over the usual purgatives is that it doesn't drive food, partly digested, out of the stomach, nor does it hurry the contents of the small intestine along too rapidly, thus preventing complete absorption of the nourishment of the food by the blood. Practically its whole use in the body is to stimulate the colon or large intestine containing the waste, thus driving this waste downward and out of the body. And in most cases cascara does this without discomfort and without causing diarrhoea.

While the powdered cascara and the fluid extract are bitter, what is known as aromatic fluid extract, flavored with licorice, anise, oil of cinnamon, sugar and other substances, is very pleasant to take, although about twice the quantity is required to obtain results.

Now, no normal individual—man, woman, boy or girl—should need a laxative, at least not regularly, nevertheless, there are many who are forced to remain seated all day, others who are too old or too ill to exercise, and others unable to eat the ordinary amount of rough fruits or vegetables, to whom the use of this simple mild non-habit-forming remedy would prove a blessing.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

BLOCKHEAD

Pope, desiring in his "Essay on Criticism" to show his contempt for study gone wrong, wrote:

"The bookful blockhead, ignorantly read
With loads of learned lumber in his head."

"Blockhead," personifying unconscious stupidity, means literally "wooden-head"; in any language, it refers to a dolt, an individual deficient in intelligence and understanding.

By this yardstick, the blockhead, like the poor, has been always among us, and perhaps in as great or greater number; the word itself, however, as time is measured, is of fairly recent coinage.

One of the earliest appearances of "blockhead" is in Cloverdale's "Erasmus' Paraphrase, published in 1548; subsequently it was commonly requisitioned for ordinary parlance.

The would-be author, a collective phrase embracing a discouragingly vast quantity of us will be interested to know that it appears in Boswell's "Life of Johnson," in the plain talk:
